CARPENDER AT HALL MURDER SCENE, DECLARES 'PIG WOMAN'

Carbarn Trio Secretly Moved

JUGGINS BASES HIS NEW FIGHT FOR SLAYESS ON ACTION IN COOPER CASE

"The carbarn boys should be punished and I am not trying to help them escape punishment. But their lives must not be taken."

With these words Attorney Francis A. Juggins today plunged into the work of shaping his fight before the Supreme Court, and possibly before the Governor and Council, in his drive to save the condemned slayers from the death penalty the law demands.

While he planned the legal maneuvers, the three slayers, heavily manacled to State Prison guards, were swiftly moved from the death house to the Cherry Hill section of the Charlestown Prison at the noon hour, when all other prisoners were locked in their cells and could not watch the transfer.

Utmost precautions were taken to shield them from the view of the other inmates. Each of the three, who, by Governor Fuller's grant of a respite, escaped the electric chair for three months at least, was handcuffed to a guard while being moved.

Attorney Juggins disclosed that he intends to cite previous murder cases in his efforts to save John J. Devereaux, Edward J. Heinlein and John J. McLaughlin, the "carbarn trio."

He named the case of Daniel J. Cooper, sentenced to death in 1911 for first degree murder. Cooper, he declared, had his sentence commuted to life imprisonment by the Governor and Council because of "psychopathic inferiority."

"I claim Devereaux was insane when he killed, but even the government admits he was a psychopathic inferior," said Juggins.

"Another case is that of Alfred W. Bartlett, who was tried in 1923 for slaying a Dorchester druggist.

KELLOGG IS SILENT ON K. C. MEXICAN PROTEST

Washington, Aug. 13 (A.P.)—The petition of the Knights of Columbus for diplomatic intervention in the Mexican religious controversy was received today by Secretary Kellogg, who said afterward that he had "nothing to say."

Ranking officials of the order remained in conference with the Secretary for a long time, but they likewise refused to comment when they emerged.

Mr. Kellogg probably will talk over the whole Mexican problem with President Coolidge at White Pines Camp before there is any pronouncement of policy.

The importance which Kellogg attached to the Knights' protest was indicated by the length of the meeting and the injunction of secrecy. It is understood that Flaherty presented a mass of details on the Willis told the New York Sun today that he is ready to fight Jack Dempsey for nothing, just for the satisfaction of knocking out the champion.

The negro who has vainly sought a match with Dempsey for nearly six years, joined his manager, Paddy Mullins, in calling the champion a "liar" for his assertions that he tried to make the match.

DR. DORAN, chief chemist in the prohibition forces, declares that it is necessary to put into industrial alcohol poisons that the bootleggers cannot get rid of when they redistill denatured alcohol to make bootleg whiskey.

Senator Reed of Missouri says that for the government to put poison in alcohol, knowing that citizens will drink the alcohol, is a near approach to murder.

However, those foolish enough to drink bootleg whiskey habitually would probably not live long anyhow; a little longer or shorter life makes little difference. If bootleg whiskey ALWAYS killed, instantly, the country would drop its whiskey habit.

SCIENTISTS GATHERED at Williamstown possess the blessed gift of hope. They say chemistry will end all our worries, including food problems. Power locked up in the revolving electrons will run all our machinery; no need of coal, oil or water power. Artificial rubber, better than the genuine, will be made from petroleum. "Artificial stone for buildings will take the place of brick shells on buildings.

THE BEST of it is that all this, and much more, is TRUE. The real wealth of the human race is not in oceans, in fertile

RICH BUT HER MARRIAGE WAS FLAT FAILURE

MRS. ROSAMOND WARBURTON

SOCIETY WIFE GETS DIVORCE

Mrs. Rosamond Lancaster Warburton, former Boston society girl, was today awarded her freedom in Paris from Barclay A. Warburton, Jr., grandson of John Wanamaker.

When the two were married in 1918 society circles in Boston, New York and Worcester believed that at last the ideal couple had, and that there would be no rift in this marital lute.

The pre-marriage prophecies run true for several years, and the couple always seemed happy in each other's company in the cycle of fashionable events at Palm Beach, Lenox, Bar Harbor, the Riviera.

But the rift came, inevitableness, and the divorce was awarded on the ground of abandonment.

HUB BOAT SAVED BY WIRELESS

Twenty-five employes of H. P. Hood & Sons owe their lives today to the British steamer La Guardia, and to the fact that one of their number, Irving Appleby of No. 204 West Springfield street, is a radio expert and knows the Morse code.

The men were bound for the broad Atlantic at the mercy of high seas in a launch when the La Guardia answered the frantic S O S sent out by Appleby.

The Hood workers were on a fishing trip, and anchored some four miles off Graves Light. A storm came up, and the launch shipped

NAMES KIN OF WIDOW AS 2 ARE ARRAIGNED ON SLAYING CHARGE

Somerville, N. J., Aug. 13 (I.N.S.).—Mrs. Jane Gibson, of New Brunswick, the so-called "pig woman" frequently mentioned in the famous Hall-Mills double murder mystery, saw Henry De La Bruyere Carpender at the scene of the crime on the night of the murder, she testified in court this afternoon.

She was testifying at the arraignment of "Willie" Stevens, the eccentric halfbrother of Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, and Carpender, a member of the New York Stock Exchange and a cousin of Mrs. Hall. The two men were charged with the murder of the Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills on Sept. 14, 1922.

Mrs. Gibson's accusation created a furore in the courtroom and County Judge Frank L. Cleary had to pound his gavel for order. The "pig woman," who operated a farm near the scene of the murder, told of being near the Phillips farm, where the murder was committed, on the night of the crime.

"I heard voices," she testified. "There was jumble of them. It seemed that there were several women there.

"It was dark. I heard one of them say: 'Explain these letters.' I couldn't make out the voice.

"I saw a small sedan nearby. Suddenly someone turned on a flashlight. In the ray of light I saw a man's face."

"Can you pick out this man in this courtroom?" asked Prosecutor Alexander Simpson.

"If you can, do so."

Mrs. Gibson peered around, then left the stand. She walked to where Carpender was sitting and pointed dramatically at him.

Carpender, who was sitting near Mrs. Hall's lawyers, looked back at Mrs. Gibson and smiled derisively.

The courtroom was in a turmoil. A chatter of conversation broke out. The judge pounded his gavel and threatened to adjourn court if order was not immediately restored.

Somerville, N. J., Aug. 13 (I.N.S.).—Willie Stevens, the eccentric halfbrother of Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, and Henry De La Bruyere Carpender, member of the New York Stock Exchange, and her cousin, were arraigned this afternoon on warrants charging them with the murder of Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills on September 14, 1922.

They were arraigned shortly after 2 o'clock before County Judge Frank L. Cleary.

The first witness sworn this afternoon was George Totten, county detective, who went to the scene of

COOLIDGE APPROVES FIRST U. S. AIRWAYS

White Pines Camp, N. Y., Aug. 13.—The first great national airways were approved by President Coolidge today.

Mr. Hoover, who announced the routes, said there is expected to be an Atlantic route, providing a continuous service over an area now served partially by several private companies. This would run from some point north of Boston to Boston, New York, Philadelphia or Baltimore, Washington and Raleigh, to either Savannah or Atlanta, and thence to Jacksonville and Miami, today.

The first, approved today, is to be known as "The Transcontinental," and will extend from New York to the Pacific Coast, terminating at Los Angeles or San Francisco. The second is to be known as "The Southwestern" and will extend from Chicago to Dallas and Ft. Worth.

Then there will be a line for the Great Lakes.

It appears probable, Mr. Hoover said, that within six months there will be a full passenger, express and mail service on the routes approved today.

SPECULATIVE STOCKS HAVE SINKING SPELL

Prices in speculative leaders collapsed sharply on the New York Stock Exchange today. General Motors was sold by speculators on the familiar axiom that the "good news was out" with announcement of 50 per cent. stock "melon," and sold down to 196¾ from its high of 203¾.

Du Pont at 237 was down 7¾. Numerous issues broke 5 to 10 points. U. S. Steel was off over 2. Hudson was off nearly 4. Loose-Wiles issues and Case were down 3 or more.

Baldwin, Consolidated Gas and Remington were hammered down 2 points before encountering buying support to stem the tide of selling.

MAD SLAYER, WITH BABES AS SHIELD, DEFIES POSSE

Cincinnati, Aug. 12 (A.P.).—With the body of his wife at his feet, Scott Workman, 40, a farmer, paced back and forth before the windows of his little house near New Richmond, Ohio, today, defying Sheriff Fred Cresswell of Clermont County and a posse of 100 men, to fire at him and two babies, he held in his arms. They are the youngest of more children.

COMMUTATION OF COOPER SENTENCE CITED FOR CARBARN TRIO

TIRELESS WORKER FOR CARBARN TRIO IS HAILED AS "HERO OF BRIGHTON"

NEW FIGHT BEGUN BY JUGGINS

He was on trial for first degree murder, but in the middle of it pleaded guilty to second degree murder with the approval of court and district attorney.

"The notation on Bartlett's record papers in that [illegible] was a 'no additional interest' and his plea was accepted for that reason."

After a brief rest, beginning tomorrow, Juggins will perfect his bills of exceptions to the rulings of Supreme Court Justice Braley and those of Superior Court Judge Frederick Fosdick.

HIS CHIEF HOPE.

His chief hope, he admitted, was to be the former, in which he sees a reason for pinning his questions with Governor Coolidge, citing a point on the question of Devereaux's sanity.

"I never said these boys should be freed," he said. "I never thought they ought to be freed. But I do say that Devereaux's mental irresponsibility should be recognized and all three suffer confinement, but not death."

He may participate in the defence of Peter McLaughlin, brother of John J. McLaughlin, who faces trial for [illegible] have asked Juggins to cooperate with the attorney already named by the court to defend Peter.

Attorney Juggins said he had received a letter from Dr. L. Vernon Briggs, noted dental expert and author of Boston, who asked him to be sure to have Devereaux's brain examined after death.

"Dr. Briggs is a little previous with his suggestion," laughed the attorney who, since the letter was mailed, has saved Devereaux a[illegible] temporarily from the chair.

LETTER FROM HIGGINS.

Attorney John J. Higgins, former district attorney of Middlesex County and one of the defense counsel at the trial of the three carbarn slayers, wrote a letter of congratulation to Juggins on his success in forestalling the execution.

The three prisoners were [illegible] by cheerful today, according to officials at the prison, although the strain of confinement in the dread death house had told on them physically.

They were fourteen days in the death cells, longer, it was said, than any other condemned men who have died in the electric chair at Charlestown.

They signalized their last day in the death house, for the present, at least, by eating heartily of the breakfast of prison fare that was supplied them.

Each of the three reported having had a refreshing night's sleep and were not disturbed by the announcement of Warden Hendry that their special privileges, such as daily visits from relatives and choice of food, must end.

A letter signed "Ku Klux Klan" has been received by Attorney Francis Juggins, who conducted the fight that saved the youths from dying this week. Of hundreds of letters that Juggins reported receiving, this was the only one that contained a rebuke for his efforts.

In three Brighton homes three mothers relaxed from the strain and gave way to unrestrained tears of joy while their friends flocked to congratulate them.

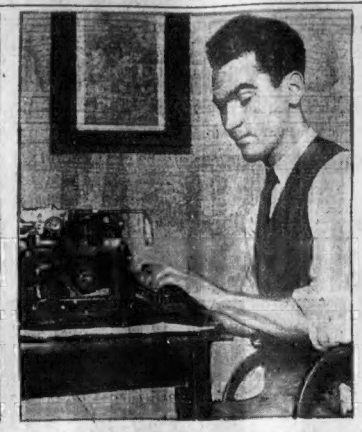
Guards were assigned to take care that outsiders did not slip into the jail yard to try to spy on the transfer of the trio.

If the Governor and Council had not granted this respite, early today, Friday the 13th, the three men would have died in the electric chair. Even as news came to Warden Hendry that a respite would be granted, he was preparing to close the death house to all visitors.

You can't go wrong by following the Classified ads on the next-to-the-last pages.

MOTHER AND SON REJOICE

Here is Frank J. Manning, secretary of the Clemency Committee, with his mother, Mrs. Sarah Manning, rejoicing at their home in Brighton over the three months' respite granted the carbarn slayers. The Clemency Committee secretary has been tireless in his work night and day, but says the fight to save the lives of the trio really has "just begun."



LABORS TO HELP "NEIGHBOR"

"Mrs. Heinlein is my neighbor," says Manning, who works day and night for the cause. "I went to offer my sympathy and to do whatever I could to help her. And what I saw that night and what I have seen since convinced me that capital punishment is the most barbarous law on the statute books." He says he will devote his life to having the law abolished.

WITH NEPHEWS AND NIECE

It is Manning's fervent hope that when children of these ages, his nephews and niece, reach his own age, 23, the death penalty, legalized, will have been long forgotten, at least in the Bay State. Left to right, Edward Wall, Jr., Jack Wall, Frank J. Manning and Eilleen Wall. All photos by Boston Evening American staff photographer.

Sister Unaware of Plight of McLaughlin

From a sister who is apparently unaware of his predicament, John J. McLaughlin, one of the three carbarn slayers, has received a postcard mailed in Venice, Italy, where she is traveling.

Surrounded by the walls and bars of his death-house cell, McLaughlin looked longingly at the picture the card bore of scenery in the City of Canals, and read and re-read his sister's brief description of its beauty.

McLaughlin took the card with him when he was transferred today from the death house to a cell in the Cherry Hill section of State Prison.

MRS. HEINLEIN OVERWHELMED

"What if they had killed my Eddie last night? What if that parting kiss through the bars yesterday afternoon had been my last to my boy? I cannot erase that thought from my mind."

Walking among the beautiful hollyhocks in her garden in Arlington court, Brighton, Mrs. Nora Heinlein today revealed the innermost thoughts of a mother who is completely overwhelmed by sadness in spite of narrow escape from death of her son, one of the carbarn slayers.

"In the death house yesterday afternoon before the respite was granted, I felt a peculiar numbness come over me, and Edward noticed it. Somehow I couldn't seem to find words. I tried to, but the task seemed too much.

"Not until I left the death house did I learn from Mrs. Devereaux that everything was in readiness for the execution last night. When she told me that the man who was to push the button was in the prison and the last details arranged, I thought I would drop.

"If I had known that the kiss I gave Edward through the bars was to be my last, they would have had to take me to the madhouse. Fortunately, the Governor's respite saved me.

"I prayed for Mr. Juggins and I think everybody, the Governor and everybody concerned. My prayer now is that they will be granted a new trial."

Carbarn Trio, Grateful See Hope for Life

HOPE. GRATITUDE. A FIGHTING CHANCE.

JOHN J. DEVEREAUX.

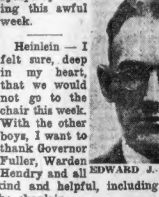
These were the thoughts of the three carbarn slayers as they were taken from the death house today, as expressed to Rev. M. J. Murphy, State Prison chaplain.

They said to Father Murphy:

Devereaux—We now have a fighting chance and may we be leaving this place for good! We all feel very, very happy and our gratitude to our lawyer, Mr. Juggins, is a whole lot greater than I can express.

McLaughlin—I hope in leaving this cell I shall never return. My prayers have been answered. I was sure the Governor would grant a reprieve. I am grateful for those who gave us their sympathy during this awful week.

JOHN J. McLAUGHLIN



EDWARD J. HEINLEIN.

Heinlein — I felt sure, deep in my heart, that we would not go to the chair this week. With the other boys, I want to thank Governor Fuller, Warden Hendry and all the others who were kind and helpful, including our chief source of consolation, the chaplain.

considerable water, and when the fishermen started back they found the salt water had entered the cylinder heads and the engine would not function.

They started drifting rapidly out to sea, helpless. Then the radio apparatus was discovered, though it was not set up. Appleby here came to the rescue, set up the radio, and started sending the message of distress.

A huge American liner was the first to answer, because of the high seas she was unable to assist the party in their plight, but promised to send aid.

Then the La Guardia appeared, and after skilful manouevering managed to get a line to the launch. The men are all taken off and brought into East Boston on the La Guardia.

BUSINESS GAIN, SAYS HOOVER

Paul Smith's, N. Y., Aug. 13 (A.P.). The general business condition of the country is even stronger than it has been in the past, Secretary Hoover of the Department of Commerce informed President Coolidge today.

The only places where there have been lags, the Secretary said, are in agriculture, the textile industry, and, to some extent, the bituminous coal.

BELMONT GIRL SECRET BRIDE IN ELOPEMENT

News of a secret marriage in Manchester, N. H., on June 27, leaked out today when it was learned that Miss Winifred Fallon, a telegrapher of Belmont, was the bride of Thomas W. Greer, Jr., No. 24 Waverley avenue, Newton, son of a Boston real estate dealer. Greer the crime on Saturday, September 14, 1922.

He said Rev. Hall's glasses were on his nose, his hat lying on his face. The love letters, to play an important part in the case, were given to Sheriff Bogart Conkling of Middlesex County, Totten testified.

Senator Simpson questioned Totten about his visit to Mrs. Hall's home the day the bodies were found. Totten said Carpender's home had been searched. Senator Simpson then turned the questioning to the alleged missing documents. Pfeiffer began the cross-examination of Totten.

Choir Singer's Husband Charges He Was Tortured

New York, Aug. 13 (A.P.).—James Mills, sexton husband of the choir singer who was slain four years ago in New Brunswick, N. J., with the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall, has revealed that he was tortured six months after the murder in an effort to get a confession of the murder from him, the New York American says today.

"I do not think it was the police who kidnaped me, smuggled me into New York, and somewhere on Long Island, and tortured me.

"One of the first things they did was to take my fingerprints, although those had been taken during the first investigation of the murder. They questioned me all night and tortured me. When I got home I was sick from their treatment."

Mills said his kidnaping took place in February, 1925, shortly before Mrs. Hall sailed for Europe, but he did not believe she had anything to do with it.

Mills is also quoted as saying: "I don't think my wife did anything wrong with the rector."

Trooper Admits Taking Money to Disappear

San Francisco, Aug. 13 (A.P.).—The Chronicle says that Henry L. Dickman, former New Jersey State trooper, now serving a term in the United States Disciplinary Barracks on Alcatraz Island, San Francisco Bay, has admitted that he accepted money to disappear during investigation of the Hall-Mills murder in New Jersey.

"Of course, I took money to shut up and get out," the newspaper quotes Dickman as having said. "If I hadn't, why would I have left there with two months' pay as a State trooper still owing me?"

The prisoner also declared that a former maid in the Hall home has not told many important details known both to her and to Dickman.

"The maid knows a whole lot more about it than she has told," he said. "She had better open up."

Dickman's knowledge of the case is considered of such importance that negotiations already have been completed to return him to New Jersey, the Chronicle said. It learned from reliable authority.

HUB LAWYER'S SON TO WED CAMPUS SWEETHEART

A campus romance started at Bates at Bates College two years ago was revealed when plans for the marriage of George H. Chase, son of Herbert M. Chase, Boston lawyer, and Miss Elsie T. Lord of Lewiston, Me., leaked out at Cambridge City Hall. They became known when Chase, preparing to file intentions for the marriage, which, is to be held in Auburn, Me., was informed that a Massachusetts license would not be valid in that State. Chase lives at No. 15 Highland avenue, Cambridge. He met Miss Lord when they were students at Bates. He intends to enter Harvard Law School after the wedding. Miss Lord is a Lewiston newspaper reporter.

HUSBAND SICK, WOMAN HUNTS FOR BROTHERS

Because of the serious illness of her husband, John William, Mrs. Anne Butler, of No. 11 Linwood street, Malden, today asked the Boston Evening American to aid her in her efforts to communicate with her two brothers, Albert E. Beech and John W. Beech. Their whereabouts is unknown to her.

Mrs. Butler said she last heard from her brother Albert in February. He was then at Beechers Falls, Vt. John was in Bridgeport, Ct., when she received the last word from him two years ago. She asks them to write or communicate with her at once.

PROBING DEATH OF JACKIE COOGAN DRIVER

San Diego, Cal., Aug. 13 (A.P.).—An inquest is scheduled here today into the death of Herman Everett Shipley, alias Don McRae, former chauffeur for the family of Jackie Coogan, child film star, whose body was found in a garage at the Coogan ranch, near Campo, yesterday. Los Angeles detectives who found the body said Shipley apparently had ended his own life with a bullet.

Shipley was sought in connection with the shooting of Joseph Bisch, a watchman, on the lawn of the Coogan home in Los Angeles, Tuesday.

COL. S. E. BLUNT LEFT ESTATE OF $862,695

Springfield, Aug. 13 (A.P.).—Col. Stanhope E. Blunt, formerly commandant at the U. S. Armory here, left an estate valued at $862,695, according to inventory filed today.

MANNING PLANS GREATER FIGHT

Frank J. Manning, Brighton youth, only 23 years old, and little known until the yeoman battle to save the lives of the carbarn trio was started, is today the hero of Brighton.

Neighbors and friends of the Heinleins, the McLaughlins, and the Devereaux families hail this tireless worker in the cause of mercy as the savior of the three men.

Even when things looked darkest for the lives of the three, Manning never ceased to labor, going without sleep, and devoting every minute and every thought to the work he had undertaken.

And whatever any man may think of Devereaux or Heinlein or McLaughlin he must admit that Manning undertook the awful labors that fell on his shoulders from the noblest of motives.

"Mrs. Heinlein is my neighbor," he said simply.

That explains how he first began his toil, simply out of love and sympathy for his neighbor.

"I went to Mrs. Heinlein to offer my sympathy and express my willingness to do whatever I could do to help her in her awful hour.

"And what I saw that night, and what I have seen since, convinced me that capital punishment is the most barbarous law on the statute books of the State.

"We have only just begun this fight.

"We have yet to add 400,000 names to our list for clemency. Then when the boys have won their battle to escape the chair I shall devote my life to abolishing capital punishment in Massachusetts.

MAJ. McDADE TO FIGHT OUSTER

Major James H. McDade, deposed as deputy master at Deer Island House of Correction, today filed with Penal Commissioner Philip A. Chapman a demand for a public hearing, under Ch93 Service laws. The hearing, it is expected, will be held within the coming week. Master James L. Molloy, who dismissed McDade, will be in charge of the hearing. Following a conference with his attorney, Elias Field, McDade said he would "have a few sensational disclosures" to make later on.

THE DURANT, INC., APPEALS $1,881 HUB TAX CASE

A petition appealing from the refusal of Boston assessors to exempt it from taxation or to abate the 1925 tax of $11,881 levied on its property, was filed today in Superior Court, by The Durant Inc. of No. 326 Huntington avenue. The petition sets forth that The Durant Inc. is a literary, charitable and scientific institution and as such as exempt from taxation under laws of Massachusetts. The organization was incorporated in Rhode Island in 1921. Its purpose, according to the charter, is to increase the efficiency of woman and develope the ideal of womanhood.

JINX DAY MOTHER IN JAIL

Today, Friday, the 13th, Pansy became the mother of thirteen puppies at the Charles Street Jail. But even as she viewed her litter with proper pride, little Number Thirteen gasped a feeble gasp and died. Pansy immediately carried the little body down two flights of stairs in her mouth, went to the jail greenhouse, dug a hole in the soft loam and buried unlucky Thirteen among the plants. Pansy is a pedigreed Airedale, married some time ago to "Kitty," Sheriff Keliher's blooded Airedale, and owned by Robert Moulton of Lynnfield. She has been sent home with her pups.

8 APPEAR IN 'BRIEF' ROWING TOGS

Royalty Sees Beauties of Noble Names Stage Eton Crew Stunt at Dance

London, Aug. 13.—All London is trying to catch its breath at the daringly abbreviated costumes which featured the masked dance given by the Duchess of Sutherland at Hampden House, and at which Royalty was present.

Some of the proudest and longest titles in the British peerage showed the greatest expanse of uncovered—Ha! Hum!—limbs and backs, so 'tis whispered.

And to gaze upon these sights were the King and Queen of Spain and the Prince of Wales and his brother, Prince Henry. The King and Queen did not appear in mask dress, but the two princes were got up to represent sheiks.

IN ETON ROWING GARB.

Everybody in the official blue book was present, as a matter of fact, and the mask dance was held to be a "rare, jolly ripper, don't-cherknow."

The sensation of the evening, and by the way everybody has been talking since it certainly was a sensation, came when eight of the most beautiful women in the United Kingdom arrived en masse. Had it been in less exalted circles, "stopped the show" would be the phrase best suited to describe the sensation.

This bevy of beauties appeared as an Eton rowing crew. The crew had a coxswain. He was Alfred Duff-Cooper, husband of Lady Diana Manners. As the delighted guests stood and gazed, he bawled out commands to his crew as they rowed their cardboard boat across the ballroom floor.

BEAUTIES IN CREW.

The crew consisted of Lady Victor Paget, Lady Brecknock, Lady Ednamie, Lady Loughborough, Mrs. Richard Norton, Mrs. Dudley Ward, Mrs. Lionel Tennyson, and Miss Poppy Baring.

And some wag has suggested the Duchess' mask dance ought to be called, "The Whole Town's Talking."

HIS GANG DRINKS AS HE DIES

Whittemore Passes On Without Repenting His Cares of Terrible Crime

Baltimore, Md., Aug. 13.—Richard Reese Whittemore, the "Candy Kid," died on the gallows early today with a smile on his lips—the same smile that won him the name of one of the most baffling criminals of the day.

There was a hint of derision in his smile. His black shroud dropped below his ankles hiding the black thousers finely stripped with white, which will be forever linked with the name of the "Candy Kid."

He died without a profession of faith.

TROUBLE WITH NOOSE.

The Candy Kid entered the chamber of death at 12:06 a. m. He was dropped to his doom two minutes later at 12:08. At 12:23 he was pronounced dead, and one minute later the body was cut down.

Some difficulty was experienced by the prison guards in getting the noose off the dead man's neck, and while they worked, the witnesses, most of them corpulent, smug business men with the morbid flair and the friend in politics, milled about and watched the grisly process.

The red brick death house, in which the State exacted a life for a life, is only a stone's throw from the spot where, on February 20, 1925, Whittemore killed the elderly guard, and died through the Madison street entrance to freedom. Somewhere a blonde woman was weeping and waiting to hold in her arms the body that was lying on the cement floor of the death cell.

And somewhere an old man who had given life to Whittemore, was trying to comfort the woman—"Tiger Lil," the widow.

NEAR SCENE OF CRIME.

Over in the night clubs, now far away—the hangouts of the Whittemore gang—men and women were sitting and drinking—and talking of the gang leader who had killed his fill of men.

Outside the jail were hundreds, perhaps thousands, of respectable men and women and their children, waiting for the news that the trap had been sprung.

The prisoners were silent. There was not a word out of any of them as the hour for the execution came and went; but as the newspapermen passed out through the jail yards and up the winding stairs and into the street, they could hear everybody repeating Whittemore's last words:

"I wish to say good-bye. That's the best I could wish anybody."

'TIGER LIL' BIDS 'CANDY KID' GOODBYE

Mrs. Richard Reese Whittemore, now widow of the notorious "Kid," met him in the jail at Baltimore and kissed him through the bars. She has put on mourning for him and will, with his father, make plans for the burial of the body. (I.N.R.)

SAVE TWO GIRLS ADRIFT ON RAFT

Madeline O'Rourke, thirteen, and her eight-year-old sister Geraldine, of Wilbur road, Nahant, crouched on a frail raft drifting out to sea, were rescued today off Bass Point, Nahant, a few minutes before their craft went to pieces.

The children were taken into a power boat by Captain Charles Kemp, commodore of the Nahant Dory Club and an official of Tudor Wharf, Nahant.

Madeline and Geraldine were bathing near Tudor Wharf. From sticks and timber the two girls constructed a raft, which barely held together. With pieces of wood they began to paddle out from the beach. Wind and tide seized the flimsy structure and bore it out towards the open sea.

The children struggled frantically to paddle back to safety. Mrs. O'Rourke discovered their plight and her cries attracted the attention of Captain Kemp.

$75,000 DURANT GEMS STOLEN

Deal, N. J., Aug. 13 (I.N.S.)—Seventy-five thousand dollars in jewels were stolen from the home of William C. Durant, automobile manufacturer and stock market operator, it was learned today.

Extraordinary precautions were taken by both Durant and the authorities to keep the loss secret, even after an arrest had been made.

John Morcicsak, who was a butler for Durant until a few months ago, was arrested and held in jail at Freehold on an open charge. John J. Quinn, prosecutor of Monmouth County, refused to tell Morcicsak's lawyer, Andrew Stokes, why the latter was being questioned about a burglary. Stokes said he would take the case into court unless a specific charge was made against the butler and Morcicsak was released.

WILL WED IN SERVICE ROMANCE
After a rapid-fire courtship of one month, Miss Beatrice Warren Livor, No. 3 Newport road, and Lieutenant George H. Bohm of the U. S. S. Raleigh, now at Charlestown, will be married soon. A waiver of the five-day law has been obtained by the couple from Judge Arthur P. Stone. Miss Livor is a Boston University student and a graduate of Miss Wheelock's School.

2 FIRE CAPTAINS TRANSFERRED

Two fire captains were transferred today by the order of Fire Commissioner Hultman, promulgated by Chief Sennott. They are Capt. Frederick W. Battle, transferred from Ladder 16 to Ladder 26, and Capt. William V. Heidt from Ladder 25 to Ladder 16.

Other firemen transferred were: George W. McGuiness from Ladder 26 to Engine 7; George D. Ryan from Engine 26 to Ladder 8; Michael E. Fallon, from Ladder 8 to Bur. S and R; and Francis A. Regan from Engine 25 to Engine 29.

Four probationers were also assigned to posts of duty: Arthur T. Bourdo to Engine 5; J. J. F. Fitzgerald to Engine 8; Daniel F. Hooley to Ladder 30 and James L. Carroll to Engine 25.

FINGER CLUES IN GEM MYSTERY

Newport, R. I., Aug. 13 (I.N.S.)—Finger prints on the jewel boxes taken from the villa of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt and found on adjoining estates proved the real clews today in efforts to trace the gem robbers.

Fifty servants at "The Breakers" were questioned and a check-up was made of the guest list at a recent house party at the villa.

Society gossip said the Vanderbilt loss may reach $500,000.

ALLIES REDUCE FORCE OF RHINELAND TROOPS

Paris, Aug. 13 (A.P.)—The allied troops of occupation in the Rhineland have been reduced from 78,000 to 76,000 since the beginning of the year in consequence of the Locarno security pact and will be further cut to 62,000 next month in response to urgent solicitations from the German government.

AUTOS KILL ONE AND INJURE 4

Malachi Kelley

Mrs. Malachi Kelley

One person was killed and four injured in two automobile accidents. Malachi Kelley, fifty, of No. 15 Levant street, Dorchester, died on the operating table at Marlboro Hospital as a result of injuries sustained when a machine skidded on the State highway near the Marlboro-Sudbury line, crashing into a tree.

Mrs. Margaret A. Lacey, fifty-six, of No. 494 Washington street, Brighton, suffered internal injuries and a possible fracture of the skull and her name is on the danger list.

Mrs. Malachi Kelley, fifty, suffered lacerations and possible fractured ribs, and Michael Murphy, thirty-two, son-in-law of Mrs. Kelley sustained lacerations.

Mrs. Elizabeth Curtis, twenty-eight, of No. 3 Owen street, South End, was taken to City Hospital with injuries to the right arm as a result of a collision at Boylston and Berkeley streets.

Southbridge Pastor Dead

Southbridge, Aug. 13 (A.P.)—Rev. Harry Leroy Brickett, 14 years pastor of the Elm Street Congregational Church, and a prominent Mason, Knights of Pythias and Granger, died suddenly of heart disease last night at the home of his sister, Mrs. G. J. Prescott of Manchester, N. H., while on his vacation.

TWO SENTENCED FOR MIXING "RUM AND GAS"

A year in the House of Correction was the sentence given Joseph F. Hand, of Washington street, Norwood, when he was found guilty today in Dedham Court, by Judge Clifford Sanborn, of driving while under the influence of liquor and operating a car after his license had been revoked.

In addition to this sentence Hand was fined $10 for drunkenness.

Harold D. Cobb of Washington street, East Walpole, was sentenced to three months in the House of Correction on a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor and fined $10 for drunkenness.

FOG BLANKET WILL CONTINUE OVER HUB

Boston will remain tonight under a slight haze of fog, according to the official forecast of the Weather Man.

Despite the apparent torrents of rain in the early morning hours and during the night, precipitation registered less than an inch, stopping at .72 hundredths.

An area of high pressure in the Middle West may promise good weather for the week-end unless it is veered off to the North meanwhile.

EAST BOSTON CLUB IS BACKING BROGNA

At a meeting of the East Boston Italian Citizen Club it was voted to indorse the candidacy of Vincent Brogna for Senator of the Second Suffolk District. Brogna, who was present, in accepting their indorsement spoke on matters pertaining to the city and State. The meeting was presided over by Philip Rotondo as president and Frank Curro was the secretary.

MEXICO TAKES COAL DEPOSITS

Mexico City, Aug. 13 (A.P.).—The Mexican government now rules coal deposits national property as it recently declared petroleum to be the property of the nation and not of the landholder.

The new mining laws, which have just gone into effect by publication, declare that all commercially valuable minerals and precious stones are the property of the nation.

These laws will have a tremendous effect on the mining industry of Mexico, in which hundreds of millions of dollars of American money have been invested.

American mining men will be more or less at sea until the laws have been interpreted and actually applied, but apparently existing concessions will be affirmed or new concessions issued to cover such grants, although transfer "foreign corporations under no circumstances can obtain such (mining) concessions."

CAR STRIKE ORDER BUT CARS ARE RUNNING

New Orleans, La., Aug. 13 (I.N.S.). New Orleans was enjoying normal street car service today despite a strike order issued to carmen which was to have been effective at midnight, but which was revoked after a last-minute settlement engineered by the City Commission.

Defies Calles

Archbishop Mora y Del Rio of Mexico, who has stirred wrath of government by charges of executions and persecutions in church strife. As result he may be tried and deported alleged outrages against Catholics in Mexico and supported all of his charges with documents from church officials in the southern Republic.

KELLOGG GETS K.C. PROTEST

Tomorrow Kellogg goes to visit President Coolidge at the Summer White House. He will remain three or four days. That will afford him an opportunity to acquaint the President with full details of the Knights' request for intervention to protect Catholic rights in Mexico.

While Flaherty refused to discuss the nature of his talk with Kellogg, he did reply briefly to a statement issued by the Scottish Rite (Mason) News Bureau under the heading, "Deliberate Perversion." The statement said the Knights had not attacked the religious persecution" under Mussolini in Italy.

Flaherty said no protest was made on the Italian matter because Italy is far away.

The Scottish Rite statement lauded the Calles government and expressed the hope that President Calles "will remain at the helm of the ship of State and unshackle his country from its 'religious manacles'".

War Secretary Denies Priests Were Executed

Mexico City, Aug. 13 (A.P.).—The Department of War today denied the assertion of Archbishop Leopoldo Ruiz y Flores of the State of Michoacan that two priests had been executed by Mexican federal forces in the town of Zanuayo, Michoacan, in connection with the religious controversy.

The statement said there had been no executions of priests anywhere in Mexico. It also minimized the reports of clashes between Catholics and soldiers in the state of Michoacan and Guanajuato.

General Miguel Pena, Under-Secretary of War, who issued the statement, described the Archbishop's report as exaggerated.

"There had been no disturbances anywhere, "except a few common riots, which have never deserved importance enough to be made known to the public."

The statement said five civilians had been summarily executed for murder in Zahuayo and Acambaro. It added that there had been no trouble whatever at Irapuato, where Archbishop Ruiz reported that a Protestant woman had been murdered by Catholics.

The government's committee of financial experts has begun to study the economic situation and the instability of exchange.

The economic boycott called in protest against the government's religious regulations does not appear to have become more serious so far as Mexico City is concerned, but it continues, nevertheless, to cause considerable depression in business circles.

NEW RADIO STATION AT OSTERVILLE ON CAPE

Washington, Aug. 13 (A.P.).—The licensing of four new radio stations and the changing of wave lengths of four others were announced today by the Department of Commerce. The new stations:

KQBX, owned by Julia B. Abercrombie, St. Joseph, Mo., with a wave length of 247.8 meters. WKBS, H. L. Ansley, Birmingham, Ala., 225. WJBT, Electric Construction Company, Gadsden, Ala., 270.1. WJBX, Henderson & Ross, Osterville, Mass., 210.

Stations changing to higher wave lengths were: KTAB, The Associated Broadcasters, Oakland, Cal., from 240 meters to 302.8. KFYY, Symons Investment Company, Spokane, Wash., from 265.3 to 273. KFQU, W. Riker, Holly City, Cal., from 217.3 to 230.6. KMA, May Seed Company, Shenandoah, Iowa, from 258 to 461.3.

FIND BABY BOY'S BODY AFLOAT IN FERRY SLIP

The body of a newlyborn boy baby, wrapped in a blanket and with a paper sac in its mouth, was found today in the East Boston slip of the North Ferry.

Medical Examiner George R. Magrath, who examined the body, refused to state what he believed to have been the cause of death or whether the child was alive when born. He said the presence of the gag would indicate that the infant was breathing when placed in the water.

According to the medical examiner, the body might have come from anyone of several cities, and he expressed the belief that it would be difficult to solve the mystery of its death.

WIDOWER WRITES NOTE AND TURNS ON GAS

Leaving a note to the medical examiner and another to relatives, Charles H. Salmon, sixty, a widower, committed suicide by inhaling gas today in his apartment in Upland road, Brighton.

Neighbors living upstairs smelled gas which was escaping from an open wall jet in Salmon's suite and seeping through the ceiling. Sergeant Merchant and Patrolman White of Brighton station tried resuscitation measures on the way to St. Elizabeth's Hospital in the ambulance.

Chief Quill, Gun in Hand, in Role of Bandit

North Brookfield, Aug. 13 (A.P.).—A lone individual, pistol in hand, standing on the track at East Brookfield crossing, held up a Boston & Albany branch train today, and threw a scare into the passengers when he boarded the train, and passed through each car, scanning every occupant.

The frightened passengers were relieved when the man departed without demanding them to stick up their hands and keep them up.

It was only Chief of Police Stephen Quill, who was in search of a Harry Maron of New York, wanted on a capias to support charge.

The August Fur Sales Reveal the Smartest Modes of the New Season

FURS, like jewels, to be in good taste must be authentic in mode and setting. That's why it is imperative, if you do not know furs, to purchase them at stores of known integrity.

Most Boston stores, during the August Fur Sales, offer the season's newest creations inspired by master Paris, London and New York designers, yet at prices made possible only by the urgent need of famous manufacturers for out of season business.

Now, of all the year, while choice and terms are most liberal, is the time to make the crowning glory of your Winter wardrobe one of the stunning new coats described in the fur advertisements of today's Boston American and Boston Advertiser.

KILLED IN BUDAPEST AMMUNITION EXPLOSION

Budapest, Hungary, Aug. 13—(A. P.)—It is reported that twenty persons were killed in an explosion on Shepel Island, a short distance from Budapest, in the Manfred-Weiss ammunition factory. It has not been possible, however, to confirm the report owing to the large area covered by the factory and the intense heat from the burning buildings. The Manfred-Weiss Works is the only munitions factory permitted in Hungary under the Trianon treaty. It is under control of the Interallied Military Commission.

Seek Lois Moran For 'A Trip To Tilsit'

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 12.—F. W. Murnau saw Lois Moran in New York, and once having seen her, he decided she was the one actress for the leading feminine role in "A Trip to Tilsit." Lois, as it happens, is—a Famous Players-Lasky, but any producer with an atom of common sense would be willing to loan anyone of their players to the Director of "The Last Latch."

Lois Moran.

Still there are always negotiations to be considered. What would the "fillum" business be without these conferences. Famous Players has not yet consented to loan their juvenile star to Fox, but all things point to a deal being consummated within the next few days.

If I am any judge of human nature Murnau will get what he wants. He has a sense of humor that is more Irish than German, and a manner that would make him the most popular star on the screen if he choose to become an actor instead of a director.

Not the half has been said of this young German with the red hair and captivating smile. I am surprised that some one has not married him in spite of himself. Yes, girls, he is a bachelor.

GENERAL LEONARD WOOD does not mind being impersonated in the movies so long as he and the history in which he participated is accurate.

Wishing to bring General Wood into "The Rough Riders," Famous Players-Lasky cabled to ask his permission to have Colonel Fred Lindsey play the role. The reply being favorable, Colonel Lindsey, who is a British army officer, will go to work studying the chief characteristics of Wood.

Patsy Ruth Miller.

APROPOS OF THE RUMORED engagement of Patsy Ruth Miller and Richard Barthelmess, George Jessel is responsible for a prize line delivered at the dinner given in his honor at the Writers' Club. Said Jessel:

"I am sorry I cannot wait and take advantage of the Summer excursion rates of $146, which provides for a round trip ticket to California with a stop over at the Grand Canyon and an engagement to Patsy Ruth Miller."

Patsy has certainly taken honors from Connie Talmadge, who at one time boasted of being the most engaged girl in Filmland.

BELLE BENNETT just cannot seem to stay away from mother roles. In this business once you do a thing well, you have the same type of character pinned on you as long as you live, unless you are fortunate enough to escape from the clutches of specialization. Belle Bennett has been chosen for the leading role in "Mother Machree," which Fox admits will be a big feature.

Quick Quizzes on the Movies

By BARBARA BENTON

K. V., BOSTON.—Your interest in the blonde hero type has induced me to take a sort of inventory of all flaxen-haired filmsters. Perhaps you will be surprised to hear that of the more prominent leading men, but two are regarded as out and out blondes—Conrad Nagel and Forrest Stanley. To be sure, there are many gentlemen with light-haired tendencies, like Creighton Hale, Glenn Hunter and James Kirkwood, but golden locks among the sterner sex are very scarce. Gentlemen with blonde moustaches? None. Evidently the casting directors do not "prefer" 'em.

C. L. Y., BROOKLINE.—Johnnie Walker is a native New Yorker and a graduate of Fordham. His first important picture was "Over the Hill," but he had been working in the films for a few years before this. Yes, he has handled the megaphone, too.

B. F. H., BOSTON.—Raymond Griffith was born in Boston and was educated at St. Anselm's. He has done many different things in the films. First as a scenario writer, then a director and now a star. His next picture is announced as "You'd Be Surprised."

T. E. S., CAMBRIDGE.—Cecil B. De Mille has abandoned his previously projected Biblical story and is now at work on an elaborate chronicle of the life of Christ. The two Schildkraut's are in it, Ernest Torrence will play "St. Peter," and H. B. Warner has been selected to be the Messiah.

F. M. K., BOSTON.—The actor you describe in your letter is, I think, Crauford Kent, and the picture you mention "The Deep Purple," released a few years ago and first played here at the Park Theatre. In its day, "The Deep Purple" was one of the finest of films and is remembered by the keen-cut character sketch of the bogus old clergyman, played by that great veteran of the American stage—James Ferguson. It was he, by the way, who was one of the cast on the stage at Ford's Theatre in Washington at the time President Lincoln was shot.

D. G. N., BOSTON—Hunter Gordon is a Canadian by birth and received his education in England. His first appearance on the American stage was in the William A. Brady production of "Life." He was "discovered" for the films by Ralph Ince. Mr. Gordon is six feet tall, weighs 175 pounds, and has light hair and blue eyes.

$32,845 ASSESSMENT ON BREWERY FOUGHT

A tax assessment bill of $32,845 was in litigation today in Federal Equity Court with the filing of a complaint for the Harvard Company, brewers, by Max Cohen, receiver for the company.

The action seeks to restrain David H. Blair, Commissioner of Internal Revenue at Washington, Thomas W. White, collector at Boston and the National Surety Company of New York from adjusting the bill as assessed at the manufacture of beer of more than one-half of 1 per cent, alcoholic provided in the government permit. Cohen explained that the Surety Company, furnishers of a $50,000 bond, were willing to make adjustment, but feels that such action would deprive him of a jury trial.

SUSPEND DRILLING IN MEXICAN OIL ZONES

Mexico City, Aug. 12.—Suspension of drilling, with the throwing out of employment a large number of workers, was reported today from the zones of Cerro Viejo and Tierra Blanca No. 9, in the Vera Cruz region.

This is the first reaction of the oil companies to the new regulations curtailing operations.

TRUTH MAY MAKE COOLIDGE ACT ON MEXICO

Mexico City, Aug. 13 (I.N.S.).—Ambassador James R. Sheffield is leaving Mexico City today for Vera Cruz, en route to Washington and the Summer White House in the Adirondacks, where he expects personally to lay before President Coolidge a complete exposition of the situation in Mexico.

It is understood here that the Ambassador will make urgent recommendations for a firm policy in protection of American rights in Mexico.

Sheffield's friends here are supremely confident that once President Coolidge really understands the situation a firm policy, as recommended by the Ambassador, will be enunciated upon, throwing into the discard the present policy, which Mr. Sheffield's friends characterize as rather lax.

SPLIT WITH KELLOGG.

Americans, and even Mexicans, here are coming to understand with ever increasing clarity that the policies of Secretary of State Kellogg and Ambassador Sheffield are widely divergent, and are becoming more irreconcilable with the passage of each month.

It is believed that if President Coolidge fails to give the fullest support to Sheffield's recommendations the Ambassador will resign. His friends have advised him to place the issue squarely before the President and to insist upon the adoption of a stronger policy.

The problems which Ambassador Sheffield is taking home with him include those relating to the alien land and petroleum laws, the regulations covering colonization, irrigation, mining and forestry and a vigorous protest against the administrative order of June 8 requiring oil companies applying for drilling permits to file unlimited bonds.

KEEPS IN BACKGROUND.

The Ambassador's friends assert that he has been submerging his own personality and views and keeping late the background his well-defined policy of firm support for every legitimate right of United States citizens.

President Coolidge's failure to declare himself has resulted in a growing conviction that he is imperfectly informed on Mexican events and the State Department's attitude toward them.

This conviction was crystallized by cabled reports from the United States which indicated that the President not only was not aware of the contents of the latest State Department note to Mexico, but that he did not even know that it had been sent.

Ambassador Sheffield sails from Vera Cruz tomorrow on the steamer Monterey and is expected to reach New York August 21.

McLEAN AND BEALE SHARE MME. BAKHMETEFF ESTATE

Paris, Aug. 13 (A.P.)—American heirs of Mme. Georgs Bakhmeteff, wife of the former Russian Ambassador to the United States, will receive a share of her estate by a settlement reached here between them and M. Bakhmeteff, who had claimed the entire estate under the will.

The heirs include Edward B. McLean, proprietor of the Washington Post, and Truxton Beale, former American Minister to Russia. The estate is said to be valued at approximately $3,000,000. Mme. Bakhmeteff, who died here June 26, 1925, was a daughter of the late General Edward F. Beale of Washington.

Two Killed In Rum Raid

Winegar, Wis., Aug. 13 (A.P.)—George Rutherford, constable, and William Stanley were killed late last night when county officials raided a moonshine plant run by Stanley and two others near here.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Amateur Skippers Gather at Quaint Old Marblehead for Races

THIS IS MARBLEHEAD'S BIG WEEK.

The deepwater harbor, known to amateur skippers from many ports as safe anchorage, is alive with boats of every size and description. Of days they flash about adjacent waters as races are called, and of evenings return to anchor, awaiting the next day's starting gun.

MAJOR YACHTS are there, proud makers of racing history. But primarily it's small boat week, the heyday for every craft, the "Brutal Beasts" of the youngsters, the Nahant "Stars," Quincy "Cats," Manchester 17-footers, and Bonders, and all those other classes.

THEY'VE COME from far and near to make up an army of boats, the largest and most representative fleet ever to gather inside the light at old Marblehead. And each has a clever skipper and a crew of tried and true hands.

FROM COHASSET and Duxbury, Annisquam and Manchester, from each small centre of Summertime racing they've gathered in Marblehead to try their prowess. Races are managed by an energetic and supremely busy committee, what with such an enormous schedule to run off.

THREE LARGE YACHT clubs are represented—the Eastern, the Corinthian and the Boston—the first named having three races each and the second one. Truly it's gala week for the old town, the like of which it has not experienced these several years.

SOCIALLY, OF COURSE, the Eastern's dinner dance of last evening brought out the elders of the yacht world—with a record-breaking assemblage, well over three hundred gathering for this weekly function.

PERHAPS THE LARGEST of many parties was that of Robert A. Leeson, who entertains through the season quite regularly. The Leesons are Marblehead Summer residents, having one of the Peach's Point estates.

THE McQUESTENS family provided two hosts, the Frank B. McQuestens entertaining a large group, likewise George E. McQuesten. It is young Mr. George McQuesten to whom pretty, dark-eyed Miss Katharine Cunningham Gray, daughter of the James Cunningham Grays, has just become engaged.

ROBERT S. WEEKS and Mrs. A. Weeks, of Brookline, in the Winter, and Marblehead Neck in the Summer, had a dozen guests for the dinner dance. H. T. Edmands was host to a score, and Thomas E. Stebbins's party numbered fourteen.

NEXT WEEK will see the major yachts at Marblehead up-anchor and away southward to join the New York Yacht Club on its annual cruise from New London to Newport. Famous cups will be raced for, by a splendid fleet of contestants.

VICE-COMMODORE JOHN S. LAWRENCE of the Eastern is taking the Advance down, as he did last year. And again, as last year, his daughter, Miss Eloise Lawrence, will be shipmates with him.

MRS. LAWRENCE goes also, and their party will include Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Borden and the Samuel Warrens. Racing runs to Newport, to Vineyard Haven, to Mattapoisett, are down on the New York schedule.

THE BOSTON FLEET will probably include the Queen Mab, the Wildfire, the Cockatoo, Herbert Sears's famous old Constellation (which has a quarter century to her credit), and the new flagship of Commodore Nathaniel Farwell Ayer.

MISS ELLA DE T. SNELLING
The younger Smart Set leader is at the North Shore, as usual, for the season.

COMMODORE AYER'S new craft makes her first racing appearance at the New York Yacht races—the local debut of this Adriatic-built schooner. The rosiest of predictions are made by those privileged to view the trim racing craft just being put into condition.

174 CLAIMING ESTATE OF MARK HOPKINS

Greensboro, N. C., Aug. 13 (A.P.)—Formal petition of 174 claimants to shares in the estate of Mark Hopkins, California multi-millionaire, who died March 29, 1878, was on file today in Federal court in an effort to obtain a hearing to establish proof of their heirship.

Hopkins died at Yuma, Ariz., leaving an estate valued at $10,000,000, the petition states.

Hopkins died intestate, and three-fourths of his estate was given his widow and the remainder to his brother, Moses Hopkins.

New Glider Record

London, Aug. 13 (A.P.).—A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph says the German flier, Kegel, has broken the world's glider record of 13.3 miles by flying from Wasserkuppe to Gompertshausen, 37.3 miles.

BULGAR'S REPLY MAY AVERT WAR

Bucharest, Aug. 12 (I.N.S.).—The Bulgarian government today will reply to the collective note forwarded to it by the governments of Jugo-Slavia, Rumania and Greece, according to authoritative information.

The reply, it was understood, will comply with all the requests made by the signatories. The note was a protest against the outrages committed by irregulars on the Bulgarian frontiers.

MASSACHUSETTS AVENUE TO BE GREAT WHITE WAY

Final arrangements for converting Massachusetts Avenue into a "great white way" were made when the Massachusetts Improvement Association, composed of business men of the district, approved plans for the lighting of the thoroughfare from Harvard Bridge to Columbus avenue. The work is scheduled to begin this month and the "white way" is to be formally opened by October 1.

EX-ENVOY A. P. MOORE UNDER SURGEON'S KNIFE

Paris, Aug. 13 (A.P.).—It is learned that Alexander P. Moore, former American Ambassador to Spain, whose removal to the American Hospital at Neuilly was ascribed yesterday to sciatica, underwent a more or less serious operation on the knee for removal of the affects of an old injury.

4 DIE, 60 HURT, IN N. Y. STORM

New York, Aug. 13 (I.N.S.).—Four persons died and property valued at $1,500,000 was destroyed by the storm that swept New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Pennsylvania.

Sixty persons were injured and one more may die.

Lightning played among the skyscrapers. More than 100 buildings were struck.

The worst traffic jam in the history of the city occurred when the subways were flooded and trains halted. One train was stalled between stations and several persons were injured by broken glass or trampled by fear-crazed passengers.

Lightning killed a boy at Hightstown, N. J., and a man at Windsor, Ct. A woman here felt four stories to death while trying to close an open window during the storm. One man died of heat prostration.

Tubes under the East River and the Hudson were flooded. Trains to Philadelphia were held up an hour.

One New York train to Washington was seven hours late.

Twins to Call Diving Champs 'Pa' and 'Ma'

Los Angeles, Aug. 13 (A.P.).—Twins were born to Betty Becker, Olympic and national woman's diving champion and wife of Charles Pinkston, Olympic diving champion of 1920 and national champion for four years.

TAFT ILL, BUT IS IMPROVING

Quebec, Que., Aug. 13 (A.P.).—William H. Taft, chief justice of the United States, who has been ill at his Summer home at Murray Bay, Que., was reported today as continuing to improve. Mr. Taft caught a very severe cold and for a time friends were afraid pneumonia might develop, it was said.

Alarming reports of his condition are officially discredited.

40-Foot Fall Is Fatal

Boothbay Harbor, Me., Aug. 13 (A.P.).—Mrs. Joseph P. Turner, seventy, of Port Deposit, Md., died from injuries received when she fell from a forty-foot cliff at Christmas Cove.

COST OF LIVING DROPS IN JULY

Due to lower costs of food and clothing, the July cost of living fell off slightly compared with June, the commission on the necessaries of life reported today.

In June elements in the family budget which came to $160 in the pre-war year of 1913, cost $161.45. In July the cost dropped to $161.30. In other words, the purchasing power of the dollar in July, compared with 1913, was but 61¾ cents.

Little relief in rents, in spite of the high rate of new construction, is seen by the commission for those of limited means. For the most part, the commission finds, high rentals are being demanded in the new buildings.

HIJACKS FREE PALS IN JAIL

Providence, Aug. 13.—A daring band of hi-jackers, enraged that two of their number had been arrested, stormed the town jail at Wyoming today and freed the prisoners while the State troopers and police were seeking the gang.

The State police held up the band at Ashaway, and after an exchange of bullets arrested two and seized a truck containing 1250 bottles of beer. The truck was registered in the name of Charles Hoffmen of Arctic.

The troopers locked up the two prisoners and scattered in search for the rest of the gang.

The hi-jackers outwitted the troopers by returning to the one place they were least expected. They forced the door of the jail and released their mates.

Balks at Flying With Black Cat on Friday, 13th

Lawton, Okla., Aug. 13.—Friday and thirteenth mean little to Lieutenant Cornelius Cousland, post field pilot, but a black cat—that's different!

Corporal George H. Wheiling, who planned to make a parachute leap from plane No. 13 at 2:13 o'clock this afternoon, wanted to take the cat along as an extra passenger.

Lieutenant Cousland agreed to make the flight, but balked at carrying the feline.

Wheiling planned to leap, if possible, from a height of 1,313 feet.

Two Hurt In Tire Blowout

MALDEN TAX CUT TO $31.40

Malden's tax rate, announced today, is $31.40 a decrease of 80 cents from last year's rate of $32.20.

While the tax rate dropped, the total valuation of property is increased $3,460,000 over last year's valuation. The increase is largely due to new construction. The total amount to be raised by taxation is $1,971,681.21.

BRITISH MINERS ASK PEACE CONFERENCE

London, Aug. 13 (I.N.S.).—A. J. Cook, secretary of the miners' federation, today appealed to the government to invite the miners to meet the government, with a view to arranging a national agreement.

This move by Cook was believed to indicate that the miners are ready for peace negotiations, but are not prepared to call off the coal strike unconditionally.

'TRUDIE' HUGS PROUD 'GRANNY'

Beuingen, Ger., Aug. 12 (A.P.).—This little village of 1265 inhabitants is paying honor to Gertrude Ederle, the American girl, conqueror of the English Channel, who is visiting her 75-year-old paternal grandmother and looking over again the scenes where she played as a 7-year-old child.

"Trudie," as Miss Ederle is affectionately known by her friends, arrived here last night, accompanied by her father and two sisters, after a triumphal passage through Stuttgart and neighboring villages.

The villagers here left nothing undone to evince their pride in the fact that a descendant of one of Bisaingen's old residents bore the honor of being the first woman to swim the channel.

The village magistrate in a pretty speech welcomed the American girl, the firemen's band played native airs a choir sang folk songs and the air resounded with the "hochs" of the villagers.

The climax of the day's events came as Gertrude saw her aged grandmother standing before the two-century-old "Bum Lamm" (Lamb's Inn), where she still lives and spends active hours in the garden.

Jumping from the automobile in which she was riding "Trudie" rushed up to granny, hugged her smothered her with kisses and beamed with joy as the old lady, tears streaming down her face, sobbed, "I never dreamed the name of Ederle would achieve world fame."

Miss Ederle's triumphal visit here was somewhat clouded by news of the death of an aunt in the United States on the day of her channel swim, a week ago.

News of the death had been withheld from Miss Ederle so as not to dim her pleasure, but it was inadvertently disclosed.

U. S. GIRLS CAN'T SETTLE DOWN TO STUDY IN PARIS

American young men really study when they go to Paris for that purpose, but the girls do their studying in the theatres and modiste shops. This is the opinion of Mlle. Berther, secretary of the American University Union in Paris, according to Miss Alice Hickey, one of a group of Wellesley students, passing the summer in Europe.

Miss Hickey, in a letter to friends here, quotes Mlle. Berther as saying: The girls say at first they are most anxious to learn French and are willing to do anything to learn the language. But soon there are fittings they must attend to and theatres they must go to. The boys are not so easily distracted.

For Children's Parties

Serve Jersey Ice Cream; because of its purity, healthfulness, and food value. Children love ice cream.

Jersey Ice Cream contains more cream, or butter-fat, than state and federal pure food standards require. This costs us more; but it helps us to make an ice cream that is much better in every way for this added richness.

Jersey Ice Cream is a refreshing, satisfying food. It is good for children. Give it to them often—they will not tire of it.

To Dealers

Quality builds business. People know Jersey Ice Cream's goodness. Dealers are paying more for it. They like "Jersey" service, too. 'Phone or write for our representative to call.

soil or even in sunlight. It is principally in the brain of man.

MANY GENTLEMEN, young and old, not interested in the proceedings of the scientific gathering at Oxford University, are intensely interested in the coming prize fight between Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney. Some preparing to bet their money on Mr. Dempsey may be interested in the advice of one who knows about fighters and their mental calibre. He says: "Be careful how you bet on a man that is worried, when he has a limited intellect, not calculated to endure worry."

Dempsey is worried. He quarrelled with his manager, who threatens to tie up the receipts of his next fight. He hasn't fought for three years and can only guess whether he is as good as ever. Be careful how you bet on him that is worried.

"IF A HOLDUP MAN faces you with his automatic," says a wise detective, "'stick them up' promptly, when he tells you to. Don't seem nervous, or HE will get nervous and perhaps shoot. bandits being usually nervous. Be polite, hand over your valuables—that is better than being killed.' Study the man's face carefully, that you may know him again if he should be caught."

Almost anybody, at almost any time, may look down the barrel of a gun in these holdup days—so the advice is valuable.

NEWS FROM MEXICO tells of five Catholic priests executed by a firing squad on the charge of inciting parishioners to revolution—they denied the charge before they were killed. News comes also that the Mexican government proposes to confiscate the property of the Church. Hundreds of large tracts worked by Mexicans, and owned by the Church, are to be given or sold to the men that worked the land. This is along the lines of Russia's example.

WILLIAM GREEN, president of the American Federation of Labor, says the Federation will not intervene in Mexico in behalf of the Catholic Church, the matter being a Mexican domestic question. Mr. Green emphasizes the importance of religious freedom.

IN ADDITION to the story of five Catholic priests executed in Mexico, Archbishop Leopoldo Ruiz y Flores announces thirty other executions—Mexicans put to death for leading rebellion against the government.

THEY CAPTURED the "gigantic wild chimpansee," loose in tame New Jersey. Mothers have kept their little boys indoors, ladies have wondered what they would do if they met the rampaging Darwinian ape. That monster, caught, turns out to be a modest little monkey, about as big as a household cat. So it is with most of our fears in this world.

SECOND SECTION

A Thrilling Story of Night Life and Night Clubs; a Mad Whirl of Adventure

Joslyn Poe, daughter of a proud, but impoverished Virginia family, wants a career, not marriage. Her mother wants her to wed. The wild blood of a line of daring women runs in her veins. She wants adventure. A seeress tells her of the "wildness" in her blood. She goes to a dance. She determines she will settle her problem that night—to marry George Ransom, well-to-do, but no dandy, or—go to New York in seek of adventure. She meets a stranger at the dance.

Milton Stein, the stranger, advises Joslyn to go to the city and to dance. Joslyn, hungry and discouraged, is heard weeping by Kittie Lane, a manicurist. Kittie gets Lee Rogers, a friend, to invite them to dinner.

While the girls are at the table with Rogers, James Kelvin, movie star, attempts to cultivate Joslyn's acquaintance There is a near row with Rogers. Kelvin goes away leaving with Joslyn a sense of some strange influence over her. A few days afterward Kittie is brought home blind from bad booze. Joslyn rushes to Stein's Academy to take a job as a "Taxi Dancer" to care for Kittie. In the academy she meets Stephen Bates, a man-about-town, who offers to go to Kittie's help.

Kittie's life and sight are saved by the doctors secured by Bates. They both go to a party at Bates'. Kelvin is there. He kills Bates in a quarrel.

Kittie saves Joslyn by telling the police that the death row was over her.

With Kelvin hiding in her apartment Joslyn is called by the district attorney. She beats him. Police watch her flat. Great luck comes to Joslyn. She is offered $250 per week as a dancer. Brierhalter asks her not to accept and offers her $500.

CHAPTER XXIII.

THE effect of Joslyn's kiss on Rogers was like magic in the transformation it worked. All at once he was alive, vibrant with a great hungering surging feeling that throbbed around her with consuming intensity.

Rogers himself broke the embrace and backed away, his eyes glistening.

"Whew! Do you do that often?"

Joslyn, always easy to blush, was scarlet. "You . . . . you're so good," she said, ashamed. "No—I don't do that often."

"But of course you don't—you couldn't." Rogers was warm with apology. "Why, Joslyn—I don't know what to say—I never thought—" His voice broke and trailed off into unexpected disconnection.

Against her will a sultry gathering of emotion agitated Joslyn; with a wavering determination she tried to chill, control, the mysterious force.

"I mustn't do that again, ever," she said rapidly. "Something came over me, something I couldn't control." Her voice grew a bit frightened. "Why, I didn't want to control it. It—it's just common!"

"You aren't common—you couldn't be," Lee Rogers assured her.

He moved toward her instinctively with the evident intention of some sort of caress. "You mustn't—not again, ever!" Joslyn warned and he stopped.

"I've got to explain to you—you won't understand if I don't," she declared quickly. "Kittie said you were some kind of a doctor—it won't be so bad to tell it to you."

"I have an M. D. degree, but I'm not practicing. I'm doing some research work—medical psychology."

"It's been in me since I was a child—that wildness—I inherited it," Joslyn said with a touch of panic. "It was here"—she pressed her chest. "I didn't know what it was. I thought it was dissatisfaction with my home, the country. But it wasn't that. It was something terrible that was bottled up in me. Just before I left, an old negro woman who had been a slave in our family, told me the truth. Some of the women—ancestors—hadn't been what they ought to be, and it was handed down."

The expression on Rogers' face was set with attention. A horrified thought ran through Joslyn's mind as to what that face would look like if he knew the truth about Kelvin. She knew, though, that it would be impossible, with her present lack of courage, to tell him.

"I think men have always more or less pursued me, but back home the conventions were so rigid and the opportunities so slight that nothing much ever came of it." Joslyn went on. "In New York it is different. Nobody knows what you do and nobody seems to care. With a girl living alone it is a case of all

9 GIRLS TO JOIN SISTERHOOD

Nine girls, graduates of this year's class at St. Margaret's Parochial School, Dorchester, sailed today on the S. S. Prince George of the Yarmouth Line for Halifax to enter the order of the Sisters of Charity, Mount Saint Vincent, Halifax.

The pier was lined with scores of relatives and friends of the girls who will shortly pledge their lives to the sisterhood. Many of the parents were in tears.

Mary Sha, sixteen of No. 14 Taft street, Dorchester, honor pupil at St. Margaret's, is the fourth of her family to enter a religious order. Two of her brothers, Leo A. Shea and Joseph Shea are Jesuit priest. A furth brother is studying for the priesthood at Brighton Seminary.

The others are: Catherine Fitzgerald, Grant street; Gertrude Quinn, Boston street; Helen Tuerley, Edison Green; Catherine Swift, Dorchester avenue; Mary Corelle, Grant street; Anna Griffin, No. 258 East Cottage street; Margaret Jennings and Margaret Sherlck.

CHANGE ZONE TO BUILD HOTEL

Ending a bitter controversy which extended over a period of several months, the Cambridge Board of Appeals voted a change in the city's zoning ordinances to allow the erection of the proposed $1,000,000 apartment hotel at Garden and Berkeley streets, a short distance from Harvard College yard.

John J. Shine was the petitioner for the zoning change. He announced plans for a six-story hotel, which was to include stores in the basement. Superintendent of Buildings Jeremiah J. Downey ruled that the use of the basement for stores made the block a seven-story affair and there followed a bitter fight between Shine and the Board of Appeals which ended with the zoning ordinance change, allowing erection of a seven-story building.

The ordinances originally banned buildings of this height.

Try Your Hand! You May Be Fortunate Enough to Win

If the first three great awards to be given to winners in the Greater Movie Season Contest are first, the $10,000 trip for two around the world on the steamship Belgenland; second, the $3,000 tour of the Mediterranean for two, on the Royal Mail liner Orduna, and third, the purse of $500 in gold, certainly the fourth award will be two weeks at the Sesquicentennial Exposition, in Philadelphia.

As in the case of the $10,000 trip around the world and the $8,000 Mediterranean tour, the winner of two weeks at the Sesquicentennial will enjoy the privilege of selecting a traveling companion.

Their railroad transportation to and from Philadelphia and their hotel and restaurant expenses will be provided free of all cost to them and in addition they will be supplied with all the exposition tickets they can use.

It is impossible to place a cash value upon this visit to Philadelphia, but it probably will be not less than $400.

OLD STREET REPRODUCED.

One of the most interesting features of the exposition is a reproduction of old High street, now Market street, Philadelphia, as it appeared in 1776. On this exposition street are twenty-six houses of 150 years old, all famous in the making of history.

At the head of the street is the old City Hall and county Courthouse and next to it, in solmen dignity, the first Quaker meeting house, with its old wagon-sheds in the background.

Close to the street, as most of the houses were in that day, and near to the Friend's Meeting House, is the Dame School, first of its kind in the old Penn colony. Next to the school stands the Paul Revere Forge, smith, anvil and everything as in the olden days.

Benjamin Franklin sits in the next building, in the editor's chair of the Franklin Prints Shop. Girard House is a tall, imposing edifice of the day when Stephen Girard lived and entertained in Philadelphia. The William Penn House was a great curiosity in its day because it was the first house in the colony to have a slate roof.

JEFFERSON'S OLD GIG.

In the centre of the Market Place, which heads the east and of High street, is what was known as the Head House. To the left stand Washington's stables and, just beyond, the house General Washington occupied when the seat of the government was in Philadelphia. A high brick wall screens the enclosed garden from the eyes of passers-by and joins closely to the Morris House.

Across the narrow side street, and within calling distance, is the Jefferson House, where Thomas Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Independence. Among the exhibits is the old gig designed by Jefferson for his own use in making the trip from his home in Virginia.

Another beautiful garden and then comes the old Ludwig Bake Shop, where Ludwig, the baker for the Continental Army, sometimes sold bread to the Hessians—and recruited soldiers as he sold them bread.

It is estimated that no fewer than 36,000,000 visitors will go to Philadelphia during the Sesquicentennial Exposition, which celebrates the 150th birthday of American freedom. Back in 1876, the Centennial drew 9,730,000 visitors. That show cost $8,980,000; this one, $23,320,000.

BIG NATIONAL AWARDS.

Any participant in the Greater Movie Season Contest who may win this wonderful trip to Philadelphia —with two weeks at the Exposition —necessarily will have carried off one of the many valuable LOCAL prizes which the Boston Evening American and the motion picture theatres are offering, because the Belgenland trip around the world and the trip to Philadelphia are NATIONAL prizes and the National winners will be selected from amongst local winners throughout the country by a committee of judges appointed by Will H. Hays, head of the movie industry.

The tour for two persons around the world and the trip to the Philadelphia Exposition, then, are NATIONAL AWARDS.

TENOR SENT ABROAD BY OIL KING

"Joe" Regan of Roxbury to Study Year In Italy; E. M. Doheny Pays Expenses

"Joe" Regan, Boston's famous Irish tenor, sails for Italy tonight to accomplish a life-long ambition, a year's training, with all expenses paid.

Regan, with his wife, who was Alberta Curtis, his leading lady, is sailing as the protege of Edward L. Doheny, the Los Angeles oil magnate. The couple leave from New York tonight on the Cunard liner Tuscania with Doheny's check for $20,000.

The Boston boy, who began his career here at the age of sixteen, in St. Francis de Sales Parish, Roxbury, attended Chauncey Scott last year as the country's exponent of the Irish musical play. He went to Los Angeles with "Heart o' Mine," with Mrs. Regan, and sang at the Doheny home.

Mr. and Mrs. Doheny were so fascinated by his golden voice that they offered to send Regan to Italy for a year's training, paying the expenses of himself and his wife.

At the age of eighteen Regan, whose home was in Roxbury, was understudying John Charles Thomas in "Aloma at Last." Later he appeared with Bessie Clayton on Keith's Circuit.

He became acquainted with Miss Curtis, a Cincinnati school teacher, in William Rock's Review, in which Regan sang the lead of "Toss of Memory." Miss Curtis had deserted the classroom for the stage and appeared in a minor role throughout the tour of the company.

U. S. ATTACKED IN SACCO CASE

London, Aug. 13 (I.N.S.).—"The United States is on trial for murder," the Labor Weekly of George Lansbury, Laborite member of Parliament said today in an appeal for the release of Nicoli Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, Massachusetts men convicted of murder.

The appeal, appearing under a large caption, "murder," asserted that "in order to conceal the secret murder of Andrea Salsedo, an Italian worker, by its police, the American government is now preparing to judicially murder two other Italian workers, to wit, Sacco and Vanzetti."

The magazine, after tracing the history of the case concludes: "The American government claims to be the true ark of the ancient common law of England. Well, perhaps, this will quash the good old law, as administered in the bloody assizes."

GAINES FEARED GIRL'S WEDDING

Seattle, Aug. 13 (I.N.S.).—Wallace "Bob" Gaines, on trial for the murder of his daughter Sylvia, feared that she was about to marry Thomas Lowe, an Eastern Technology graduate and instructor, according to a declaration to Judge Robert H. Jones by Prosecutor Ewing D. Colvin as the trial was resumed today. Miss Gaines had been corresponding with Lowe, it was stated.

Colvin made his offer of proof in the absence of the jury. The defense objected to the proposal.

Judge Jones ruled that Colvin might recall witnesses through whom the State expects to prove his contention. The judge added that he would rule on the admissibility of evidence as specific questions were asked of the witness.

MIXED GIRLS, AUTO AND BOOZE; IS FINED $50

"Whiskey, girls and auto at 2 o'clock in the morning do not mix well and constitute a menace on the highway," Judge Arthur P. Stone stated today when he had heard the case of John G. Drohan, twenty-six, No. 191 Cummer street, Somerville, charged with operating under the influence of liquor.

Drohan was arrested by Arlington police when he and a companion were found in the company of two girls in a machine at 2 o'clock on the morning of July 11, according to the testimony given in East Cambridge District Court, where the trial was held.

Judge Stone found Drohan guilty and fined him $50. The young man asked for time to pay and the fine was suspended until tomorrow morning. Drohan waived his right to appeal.

Valuable Ring Returned

RING—Advise person who found diamond ring at Cleveland Apts., Friday, Aug. 6, to communicate with Mrs. Clif Woods at once. Ring insured for $1,500. Company will follow case relentlessly

Friday, August 6th, Mrs. Clif Woods missed her valuable diamond ring. Much perturbed and worried, Mrs. Woods notified the insurance company and also placed the above classified ad in the Boston Evening American and Advertiser exclusively. The ad ran one day only, and before the insurance company had time for any investigation, the ring was mysteriously returned by messenger.

CHUCK CARNEY TO HELP COACH HARVARD ELEVEN

Arnold Horween Says Coaching Position Still Indefinite

Reports from the University of Wisconsin today indicated that Chuck Carney, All American end at the University of Illinois, and coach of the Badger freshmen last year, will be one of Arnold Horween's assistants at Harvard this fall.

Speaking over the phone from Chicago, Horween said that Carney's signing was not definite and that nothing would be announced concerning his staff of assistants until his arrival in Cambridge the middle of September.

"Nothing definite has been done about Carney," said Horween, "and for the present I have nothing to announce. As a matter of fact, I probably will not be ready to name my assistants until I reach Cambridge in September."

Carney played end at Illinois several years ago and was rated one of the best the Urbana team ever has turned out. He made the All-Conference team and was the choice of many All-American selectors. Since his graduation he has been coaching, last year with the yearling eleven at Wisconsin.

New England Fans Show Consistency in Poll

However the pendulum swings in other sections of the country, the New England vote in the Hearst Popularity Contest maintains the same even tenor of its way.

When the contest first opened Helen Wills was our favorite and Helen still is. The remarkable consistency shown by the first four place holders has been the chief feature of the local balloting. Helen Wills, Babe Ruth, Bobby Jones and Glenna Collett, in that order, have kept their places, while Gertrude Ederle and Jack Dempsey have been the only contestants to rise toward the top with any great rapidity.

The nationwide totals show Helen in third place, topped by Babe Ruth, who is first, and Dick Howell, the swimmer, whose support in the Middle West has been startling.

Chicago and New York lists show large numbers of athletes—"favorite sons," so to speak—with one or two votes apiece. This feature strangely enough has not entered into the local competition at all. The number of athletes voted for has been small, and practically all have received more than scattering support.

Helen Wills	960	201	96
Babe Ruth	1,000	200	180
Bobby Jones	170	140	170
Glenna Collett	170	140	170
Jack Dempsey	810	10	60
Gertrude Ederle	810	10	60

McFARLANE AND SMITH MISSING AT P.G.A. TOURNEY

New York, Aug. 13 (I.N.S.)—A free-for-all scramble was certain to develop at the Pennock County Club next Tuesday when ninety-one golfers will contest for only eleven places in the qualifying rounds of those who will represent the metropolitan district in the annual P. G. A. championship.

Thirty-six holes will be played on the day in question. Of the leading district pros, only Willie MacFarlane, 1925 open champion, and Macdonald Smith, metropolitan champion, were missing from the entries.

Inside Golf

When the golfer has teed up his ball or approached it on the fairway he will do well, as a general rule, to get ready for the shot quickly but execute it slowly. That is, do not fuss around too long in the address or in aiming, etc. To do so only promotes a condition of uncertainty. Soon one is thinking of too many things and mental confusion. And your last thought usually will be to avoid some trouble ahead, a trap or ditch and, since this constitutes the final mental picture before executing the shot, naturally the ball will be dumped right into this hazard. This is the factor to golf that so often causes you to plunge directly into trouble when you see it ahead of you. Prepare quickly for the shot, then execute it boldly, but keep always in mind that you are to take plenty of time with the actual swing.

that Dempsey says he tried to get me in the ring for the last five years." Wills is quoted as saying by the Sun. "He's a liar."

"If he keeps on fussing around with that sort of stuff he won't have to wait till he gets me in the ring. He can fight me in the streets.

"I'll fight Dempsey any time he wants to meet me at Broadway and Forty-second street, and I don't want a penny to fight him, either. I'll knock him out so quick he'll be sorry he was ever born."

Heavyweight Bout Hits Another Snag

By MURRAY LEWIN
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

New York, Aug. 13.—Jack Dempsey's chances of obtaining a license to box Gene Tunney in this State are practically dead.

This was the belief of well informed sporting men today after they had perused a telegram sent by D. Walker Wear, a member of the License Commission, to George Brower, the boxing commissioner, who had called a special meeting of the State Athletic Commission in an effort to "railroad" a license for the champion.

Wear's telegram was a caustic bit of candor which told the boxing commissioners just what he thought of them. Addressed to George Brower, the telegram follows:

"I deeply regret that you did not have the public interest in mind previous to your wire of today and I could not under any condition so far forget my self respect by meeting with the Athletic Commissions."

Signed: "D. Walker Wear."

Colonel J. J. Phelan, chairman of the License Commission and Wear's colleague, also sent a telegram "regretting" his inability to attend the meeting because he "deems it advisable in the interest of all concerned that both bodies function separately. Will therefore not be present."

FRUSTRATE BROWER.

Thus the two license commissioners frustrated Brower's attempt to force a Dempsey-Tunney match upon the New York public. At the same time they publicly expressed their opinion of Brower and William Muldoon, who, by their votes ten days ago attempted to O. K. the match, despite the fact that for two years Jack Dempsey has been ineligible in this State because of his refusal to meet Harry Wills, who the commission has repeatedly declared is the "logical contender."

The law, as framed by Mayor Jimmy Walker when he was in the State Senate, empowers any member of the State Athletic Commission to call a special meeting "whenever necessary."

George Brower, taking advantage of that clause, called a special meeting for yesterday morning with the intention of clearing up the Dempsey tangle and, some critics say, of "forcing" the license commission to issue the champion a license.

William Muldoon and James A. Farley, chairman of the commission, accepted Brower's request.

PLAN FAILS.

But Brower apparently forgot or did not know that the License Commission is a separate body empowered to function separately.

Thus, by calling the special meeting, he not only failed to advance Dempsey's cause, but put himself in the position where the license commissioners were enabled to snub him publicly. They did.

Phelan and Wear are not diplomats. They are soldiers, Phelan being commanding officer of the 164th Infantry, the old "Fighting 69th." Wear is also a colonel and was overseas with Phelan.

CHASING the CHAMPION

Written by HARRY WILLS for the BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

By HARRY WILLS—CHAPTER XI

It was not until 1920 that I got my first chance to make some real money. The International Sporting Club of New York was running a big show over in Jersey and they wanted me to head the card with Fred Fulton.

One day Mr. Gavin, who was president of the club, asked me to come down to his office to have a talk.

Jack Britton was to get $10,000 for meeting some French third-rater, one of the others was to get $10,000, Frank Moran was to get $5,000 for boxing Wild Bert Kenny, and Kenny was also getting a good chunk.

The first thing Mr. Gavin did was to hand me a cigar with a broad gold band.

"Wills, I'm going to do you a big favor," he said. "I am going to give you a match in which you will make more money than you ever did in your life. Paddy Mullins, your manager, told me you never got more than $2,000 for any one fight.

"I think it's a shame that a man of your ability should be kept down the way you have just because you are colored. I want you to meet Fred Fulton and I'm going to give you more than twice as much as you ever got in your life. I'm going to give you $5,000!"

Gavin Forced to Raise Price

"Mr. Gavin," I said, "I'm glad to see that you like me so much. You say that I have been held back because of my color and that it is time I had a chance to make some real money. I think so, too, and that is why I am not going to fight Fulton for $5,000."

Promoter Gavin suddenly dropped his friendly tone.

"Well, what do you want?" he asked. "All New York?"

"No, I don't want to be unreasonable," I said. "I'll box Mr. Fulton for you for 25 per cent. of the gross receipts."

"That's out of the question," he snapped.

A few days later he called me on the phone again and said that my manager was willing to take the match for $5,000.

"Well," I said, "if Paddy is willing to take the five grand, let him fight Fulton, because my price is $10,000."

It did not take him long to accept. He probably would have gone much higher if I had held out longer, for the match looked like a big thing then. It drew over $160,000.

Reports of Frameup Stir Fans

Although I was sure Fulton would be easy for me, I went into training some weeks before the fight.

That $10,000 was my first big shot, but it sounds bigger than it really was. In the first place my training operations cost me nearly $3,700. Most of that went to pay off sparring partners. After the expenses were paid, my manager took a third of the remainder.

Immediately after the match was announced, rumors that it was not going to be on the up and up began to fly around. It was whispered in Harlem that I had agreed to lay down. Because I had been side-tracked by the white contenders so long, my people were suspicious.

In tomorrow's article Wills tells of offers made him to "lay down" in his bout with Fred Fulton.

WILLS FORCED TO QUIT RING BY BOSTON BOARD

think straight but not straight. They talk right from the shoulder and have no respect, as Wear so frankly telegraphed, for men who use mere words to cover their dilatory methods.

The absence of the License Commissioners made it impossible for the Athletic Commission to take further action on the Dempsey matter.

MORGAN AND DUNDEE TO FIGHT IN FRISCO

San Francisco, Aug. 13 (I.N.S.)—Tod Morgan, junior lightweight champion, and Johnny Dundee, vet eran New York fighter, will meet in a ten-round bout here on either September 7 or 8, it was announced today.

DUNDEE BOXES PHIL M'GRAW TONIGHT

By JACK CONWAY.

Ancient Johnny Dundee will brush back his whiskers tonight and venture forth to battle in a 12-round bout with Phil McGraw of Detroit at the Coney Island Stadium, N. Y.

Dundee, once king of the featherweight and junior lightweight divisions, believes he can still win a few fights despite creaking joints and a general slowing down of the fistic motor.

Jack Conway

McGraw is a tough, tough kid who has picked up $60,000 in New York during the past six months as a result of his combative qualities. He gives action, which is what pleases the cash customers the over in the big town, as is true everywhere else.

Red Chapman battled McGraw in Detroit last Winter. Needless to say, Red won.

If Dundee comes through tonight's bout without getting wrecked, he will hop a train for the Coast where he will take a shot at Tod Morgan's world's junior lightweight crown on September 9.

DUNDEE told this writer he will never forgive Jimmy Johnston, his former manager, for getting him to surrender his world's featherweight crown in a statement to the New York Athletic Commission above his own signature.

"And to think that fellows like Rocky Kansas got $50,000 for defending a synthetic title and I gave mine away," wailed Johnny.

Harry Greb will receive an opportunity to regain his title as world's middleweight champion when he tackles Tiger Flowers in a fifteen-round bout at Madison Square Garden, New York, on next Thursday night. Greb has trained harder for his coming meeting with Flowers than he has for any contest of his career.

In the past, the matter of training has been one of the least things considered by Greb. His unlimited reserve of vitality always carried him to victory. Then came the loss of his title to Flowers and Greb realized the first time he was not only human and that he would have to adhere to the rules of training if he were to retain his position with the leaders in the grand old game of swat.

Paul Berlenbach, former world's light heavyweight champion, will swing back into action when he tackles Francois Charles, French light heavyweight, at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn on next Wednesday night. Berlenbach should win over the Frenchman.

Kid Kaplan, who recently invaded the lightweight ranks, will tackle Jimmy Goodrich in a bout on the same card.

Red Chapman and Honeyboy Finnegan are in training for their ten-round bout which will be staged by the Suffolk A. A. at Braves Field on August 24. With the latter tipping the scales at 123½ pounds, the rival featherweights should have all of their strength when they enter the ring. Chapman can make 126 pounds and still be strong, but it would be unwise for the scrappy Finnegan to attempt to make low poundage.

He cannot himself hustle when weighing less than 123 pounds.

Sammy Fuller, who tackles Johnny Brown of Topsfield in the semi-final of ten frames, has also started to tune up. There are many keen judges of boxers who are certain Fuller will be the undisputed featherweight champion of the world within two years.

Jess Gave Dempsey Big Shock in 2nd Round

This is the twenty-ninth chapter of Jack Kearns' thrilling story in which he replies to the charges of Jack Dempsey. It is the first time that the man who put Jack Dempsey on the pugilistic map tells of his experiences when he was a prize fighter. Read this story every day in the Boston Evening American.

By JACK KEARNS
CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

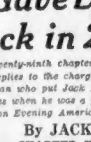
THINGS had come along so swiftly in that first round at Toledo that I'm not quarreling with anybody who happened to get rattled. Now that it is all over and in history, I want to say that Warren Barbour was a man in a tough place.

There could have been worse than Pecord, and as for Joe Bannon and Jack O'Brien, well, they did their stuff.

I didn't steal the fight in that first round but it wasn't their fault. Barbour couldn't be kidded out of it, that's all.

Finally the bell rang, for the second round. You'll remember that I sent Dempsey out to take his time. His instructions were to move about and make Jess miss.

Dempsey had fought the equal of twenty rounds in that first period and it was playing safe to let him rest up. Besides, there was the third to come, if Willard didn't fall down in the second by himself.



Jack Kearns

But he fooled us. And let me put in a plug right here for Big Jess—he was game! He landed one good blow in that second round that almost went through Dempsey's body.

WILLARD RALLIES.

He was going along nice, feigning Jess out and making him miss, but Jess nailed him with a right hand uppercut to the body that lifted Dempsey two feet off the floor. He fell right in and clinched until he got his bearings. The bell rang ending the round before Jess could do another thing. Dempsey was all right when he came to his corner.

Barbour got himself a hammer and it was with this that he rang the bell for the third. Jack gave Jess one of the worst whaling in the round that a champion ever got in this world at any weight. Willard took it gamely. He was on his feet at the end of the third round, but had to walk clear across the ring from the safe spot on which he had taken the seventh knockdown and count in the first. I knew he was done for, but thought he'd at least get up and take a few in the funeral.

Jess Willard

"I can't go on," he told Pecord, and without another word, Pecord turned and crossing the ring, lifted Dempsey's right arm high into the air. Dempsey was the champion of the world.

Now I come to a part of this story of Toledo that must be told. Ever since that fight, you've heard of horseshoes and bolts and railroad spikes in Dempsey's gloves. I want to spike that libel for all time in justice to the fight game.

KEARNS EXPLODES YARN.

I have my own system of taping a man's hands. I used half inch white surgical adhesive tape. I cut a dozen strips, about four inches long for each hand. These I overlapped, beginning by laying the first strip across the back just in front of the knuckles.

I over lapped each succeeding strip until the whole, made a compact little pad. It made a perfect pad for the knuckles. With this in place I took three strips for each hand and fastened each between the fingers and drew it tight across on the back of the hand, so that the entire pad was held firmly in place.

When Dempsey's hand was gripped, this pad formed a perfect cast for his knuckles. You could hit a brick wall with it. I used no gauze at all on top of this.

I went into Willard's dressing room to see how he was getting on with his bandages. He was all alone, a pathetic figure even then. Jess, a cranky cuss, had apparently chased all his handlers out of the room.

KEARNS RIDS JESS.

I stood quietly watching him trying to wrap his big paws. He was trembling as if he had the ague. I felt then he was licked, before he went into the ring. I saw my chance to ride the old boy so I began:

First I grabbed the gauze out of his hands.

"Don't try to wrap your hands like that Jess. What in hell are you trying to do anyway? You'll never get anywhere with that kind of wrapping. You're meeting a tough young boy. You can't afford to have your hands all clutched up like this.

"This fellow of mine has been going around breaking fellows' legs off at the ankles and you've got to be taped right or you'll find yourself on the floor. Let me tape those hands for you."

He held out his big paw and I started to work on the taping. I fussed and I muttered and stalled around to get his goat. Suddenly he jerked his hand away.

"Aw go on. I'll tape my own hands. I guess I know how to do it, Kearns."

KANSAN WAXES FEARFUL.

"A nickel will get you rich if you want to bet that you know how to tape them, Jess. I'm telling you that this is a rough. You think you're meeting out there in the sun. You'd better suppose some hands fixed right or you'll wind up in the cellar.

"I'm only trying to do you a favor. Anyway you'll not have any more trouble Sundaysen an hour from now. We're bringing up a new champion, Jess, ringing up Jack Dempsey's name."

I gave old Jess this parting shot and stood in the doorway to see how he was taping it. Then I left him sitting there, shivering with nervousness. He was licked then and there.

Tomorrow Kearns tells of how he tried to induce Harry Wills to become a sparring partner for Jack Dempsey.

The Springfield Boat Club's junior crew will compete in the junior event at the Worcester Regatta, August 21.

CLARKE ASKS STRICT DISCIPLINE OF PIRATE REBELS

VETS LEAD IN ATTACK ON EX-BOSS

Carey, Bigbee and Adams Head Insurgents During Last Series in Boston

PITTSBURG, Aug. 13.—Bill McKechnie, manager of the champion Pirates, has asked Fred Clarke, his assistant and also assistant to the president of the Pittsburgh baseball club, to return to his accustomed place on the Pirate bench, from where a few of the elderly clique on the club wished to have him removed.

But Clarke, sensing the need of strict discipline in a club, now in the thick of the pennant fight, has issued his ultimatum.

It is until those responsible for the petition presented to McKechnie in New York that Clarke be kept off the playing field and bench, have been severely disciplined, the uniform which was put on last year after a ten year absence, will still hang in the locker until Clarke finds out whether McKechnie or the players are running the club.

PLAYERS ANXIOUS.

Meanwhile Max Carey, whom Clarke developed into one of the greatest fielders in the game; Babe Adams, the rookie whom Clarke used against others judgment to win the 1909 World's championship, and Carson Bigbee, sub outfielder who presented the petition for Clarke's removal in New York, are wondering just what Clarke means.

The outcome of this dis-ension and the existence of a clique opposed to Clarke, became known today. Clarke had been absent for four days from the bench, where he has helped direct the destiny of the club. This action was taken, it is said, after some of the players had taken objection to his presence there.

This objection finally led to a conference of the players, and at a meeting in Boston last Saturday a verbal petition was drawn up and Carey, Bigbee and Adams chosen to present it to McKechnie.

McKechnie learned of it before the team left Boston. Clarke got his first intimation of it when they arrived in New York, when McKechnie asked Clarke to meet him in his hotel room.

CLARKE HOLDS PARLEY.

When Clarke heard these players were behind the move he asked they be sent to his room. When they arrived Clarke laid his cards on the table and asked the trio to do the same.

It was reported that Clarke has not interfered with McKechnie in any way, but after the first game at Boston last Saturday, he old McKechnie that he thought it would be a good idea to put Carey on the bench for a rest.

Clarke did not mean this as a derogatory to Carey. Max has been in a batting slump and Clarke thought the rest would help him.

At a meeting of the players in the New York hotel a vote taken as to whether Clarke should be on the bench resulted in 19 to 6 in Fred's favor.

When asked about the affair, McKechnie said: "To me it is one of the most distressing things in my baseball career. Fred and I have always been friends. And close friends, ever since he came back to the club.

FIRST HINT OF TROUBLE.

"Never has there been a word or an argument between us. He respects me as the manager of the club and I respect his judgment in the many things which we talk over concerning the club almost daily.

"I put my foot down on the affair the minute I heard of it and am willing to go to the limit to maintain harmony and good feeling necessary to maintain a club of the standard of ours.

"You cannot make it too strong that Clarke and Ilze very close, respect one another in our jobs and are always willing to listen to any proposals or suggestions either of us make to the ultimate benefit of the club."

FUTURE PRO GRID STARS

MAY BE SEEN AT TEPEE

The above photo is of Bill Murphy, holding ball, and Hilary Mahaney. Murphy has been signed by Coach Herb Treat for a line position. The former Princeton star is hot after the services of Mahaney, All-American end and former Holy Cross star.

Boston Pros Sign Eight College Grid Stars

The Boston eleven of the American Professional Football League has signed five former college stars, and has the conditional acceptance of another. By tonight or tomorrow it is expected that several more signatures will have been affixed to contracts.

Jimmy Wallis, backfield star at Holy Cross for three years, whose touchdown was the margin of victory over Harvard last year, and Billy Murphy, captain of Boston University last Fall and a stellar end throughout his college career, will be with the best club this Fall.

So, too, will Hilary Mahaney, Gerard Sunbihan and Mel Stephens. Paten played tackle at Boston College, Sunbihan at Williams, and Stephens at Mt. St. Mary's in Maryland.

Paten stands out among the best linemen in recent years at the Heights, while Sunbihan made his reputation in halting Gil Dobie's famed offtackle play at Cornell for two successive years before he remodelling into a fullback. He will perform in the line again this Fall. Stephens was an All-Maryland tackle and played on the same school eleven with Herb Treat, who is now coaching the Boston pros.

These three tackles in addition to Treat, should form a powerful bulwark in the line.

Dinny Gildea, former Holy Cross captain and now coach at Everett High, has agreed to play with the local team provided the school authorities do not object.

According to Coach Treat, three prominent stars are being sought and there is optimism in camp that their signatures will be obtained. There are Cy Wentworth, formerly of New Hampshire, who starred for the Providence Steam Rollers last season; Hilary Mahaney, All-American end at Holy Cross, and line coach at B. U., and Con O'Brien, B. C. and Pere Marquette star.

Ralph Offrey of Princeton and Bull Lowe of Lafayette already have been signed. The latter will captain the team.

All Baseball Clubs to Contribute to Matty Fund

NEW YORK, Aug. 13 (A.P.).—Saturday, September 12, has been selected as a National Matty Day, and all professional, semi-professional and amateur baseball teams throughout the country have been asked to donate their receipts to the memorial fund for Christy Mathewson, once great pitcher of the New York Giants.

The name of every team, be it ever so humble, will be placed on the honor roll in full view of all who visit the great memorial to be erected at Bucknell College, Lewisburg, Pa.

BANNY OUT OF LINE-UP WITH INJURY

The Boston Braves left Rochester, New York, this morning for Brooklyn in a badly crippled condition for their two doubleheaders on Saturday and Sunday in that city, according to word received here today.

A telegram from Doctor Knight stated that Manager Dave Bancroft will be out of the game for at least three weeks with a compound fracture of the right thumb, and Frank Gibson, regular catcher, may be out for the rest of the season.

Bancroft's injury was incurred in attempting to prevent a collision with Douthit of the Cardinals last Wednesday. Gibson, said Dr. Knight, is in bad shape with his injured left knee, and has been advised that the only cure will be a long rest. The doctor has suggested that he hang up his uniform for the rest of the season.

Insamuch as Zach Taylor, the other first string receiver, is still laid up with a badly hurt left shoulder, of which he N.Y.an has just been aware, the catching burden will fall upon Oscar Siemer and Sid Womack. Johnny Cooney, Jimmy Welsh and George Mogridge, who also reported to Doc Knight to have their troubles ironed out, will be available for the Brooklyn series if necessary.

Following the two double-headers with the Dodgers the Tribe leaves for its tour of the West.

GOLFERS FACE HARDEST TEST

New York, Aug 13 (A.P.)—Jack Forrester, professional at the Baltusrol Golf Club in New Jersey, where the National Amateur Championship will be played next month, believes he has a course which will defy the onslaught even of that marvel of the links, Bobby Jones of Atlanta.

There will be 6750 yards of trouble, according to Forrester, 3445 going out and 3305 returning. Several changes have been made for the championship and the medalist, therefore, will establish a course record.

The figures for the present layout have been set by Bill Reekie, Metropolitan amateur champion, 66.

Friedman Buried in New York

Abe Friedman, former New England bantamweight champion, was buried today in New York with simple services, it was as Abe would have had it, as in life the once master boxer was quiet and unassuming with no wish for undue-sonary display.

Friedman's body was removed to New York from his home in Arlington Jr. was accompanied to New York by Mrs. Friedman, Happy Robinson, John J. Mooney, Eddie Curley and Bobby Goldman.

Upon the arrival of the body in New York it was met by Tony Palamo (formerly of Boston and Paul Doyle, welterweight boxer. It was removed to the home of Friedman's mother in the East Side, where funeral services were held.

Tributes to Friedman were received from all parts of the country. It is seldom that a boxer has attained the heights of popularity gained by the little Ghetto boxer. In the ring Friedman was virtually unbeatable. He fought Pete Herman, Young Montreal, Jack Sharkey, Roy Moore, Terry Martin and all the great boxers of his day.

Ellen Captures Manhasset Cup

Owner J. Lewis' 30 rater Ellen won the Manhasset Bay challenge cup for the Boston Yacht Club off Marblehead with 40 points, a margin of one point over Charles Francis Adams' Gossoon which was second with a total of 24 points. Rowdy V was third with 27.

The honors of the day went to the Ellen II, sailed by James L. Ford, which won the first race of the series, but was disqualified for fouling the Gossoon at the first mark.

CRANE-HIBBARD TEAM LOSES IN EXTRA HOLE MATCH

OVER TIME CONFLICT AT ESSEX

Hodder and Learnard Score Hard Earned Victory on Nineteenth Green

By BILL GRIMES

Charles Crane, one time intercollegiate winners, was all square with his opponent, Bill Collins, on the 18th hole of the match and sent it into extra holes.

On the 19th hole Crane pulled his tee shot into the rough and Collins, playing safe, reached the green in two. Crane, however, got out of the rough with a beautiful mashie shot to within a few inches of the pin and sank the putt for the match.

Collins had the best of the argument in the morning round, when he was one up on Crane at the end of the first nine holes. Crane, however, squared the match on the 14th hole, when Collins missed a short putt for a 5, which would have given him the match.

Crane had his best shot of the day on the 15th hole, when he sank his second shot for a 3, which squared

TUNNEY VISUALIZES TRIUMPH OVER FISTIC MONARCH

GENE SAYS KAYO SURE FOR JACK

Challenger Declares His Experience Will Prove Greatest Asset in Title Bout

This is the second of a series of articles written by Gene Tunney exclusively for the Boston Evening American. The next will appear next Tuesday.

By GENE TUNNEY

Speculator, N. Y., Aug. 13.

OF course, I think I'll knock out Jack Dempsey. If I didn't think so, I never would have accepted the match with him. I could have had a fight with Dempsey before now, but I always clung to the insistence:

"When I feel that I'm ready for Dempsey, I'll go after a match—and not before."

Not until these last few months have I come to consider myself able to whip Dempsey. In earlier times I was lacking in experience, lacking in height and lacking in poundage. I never felt that I could "spot" the champion a lot of bulk.

Gene Tunney

If I felt I weren't ready for Dempsey now, I'd just back away from that fight until I was ready. For I realize that any man who goes against a champion and is beaten, rarely gets a second shot. If I weren't all primed to knock a world's titleholder into a state of coma, I'd hold off for another year.

KAYO SURE SAYS GENE.

But I AM READY. I've gained all the experience I've needed in battling men like Gibbons, Madden, Carpentier and a dozen of the others. Nature has given me added height and increased poundage without losing any of my speed.

Certainly I'm thinking of knocking Dempsey flat. Why not? He's easy to hit; he's a mark for a right hand punch. When he meets me he'll take a lot of them. I know he's a good shock absorber, but Dempsey himself insists "no man lives who can take one solidly on the button and still stand up."

If Dempsey is right — and no one is inclined to dispute him—then Dempsey is Georges Carpentier going down in that fight, for I AM going to smack him on that button.

JACK LACKS DEFENSE.

I want Dempsey to come into me—and he can come in with all those wild swinging punches that he cares to throw. I'll not be out of the way of such punches.

If Dempsey isn't hitting me, he can't be hurting me, can he? I don't care if he has the fistic power to knock down a 20-story building. It's of no value to him if he can't LAND those punches.

Three men had Dempsey within one punch of defeat. If Carpentier could have driven through with one more crasher in the second round of their fight, Dempsey would have gone down—and stayed there.

Bill Brennan staggered Dempsey in the second round of their battle and if he could have driven through another powerful punch to the same spot within a few seconds later, he could have dropped and perhaps put away the champion.

And then there was Firpo. He had about three chances to land that final blow, only to fail. His first punch of the fight nearly paralyzed Dempsey. If he had followed with just one more, Dempsey was through then and there. Later he nearly dropped Dempsey again. One more punch at the time would have stopped Jack. But Firpo couldn't do it.

No man—not even Dempsey—can be lucky ALL THE TIME. The law of averages—if nothing else—is due to get him. And I think I'm this law of average.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

By Sted Chandler

THERE is considerable twitter over what Dempsey's three ills years have done to what is called the "Fighting Flame." There are acute critics who are convinced that the old Tiger in Jack is dead. Others are quick to assert that Dempsey still is, and always will be, the two-fisted, undaunted Man Mauler.

An argument, of course, which will not be settled until the man from Manassa steps ags n into the long deserted ring.

The Fighting Flame in Jack Dempsey made him what he is as a fighter—a nonpareil aggressor; a punishing, unpunishable puncher.

Is the Flame still there? Whose opinion is right? That we won't know until later. But the odds are a hundred to one that, though Dempsey is an overwhelming money favorite, the heart of the public will be behind Gene Tunney because of that Fighting Flame which carried him beyond the Zone of the Interior to the place where bullets were thicker than rivets in a shipyard.

Then there will be Esther Morrison, who we maintain is, at least, on a par with the best girl divers in the country, which means practically in the world. In the Nationals at Philadelphia recently she placed second to Helen Meany, the national and Olympic champion, but we have seen the two compete together when the Boston Swimming Association girl had it over the titleholder like a double-order circus tent.

THEY are talking of a monument to Gertrude Ederle to be erected at Cape Gris-Nez, where she plunged into the channel on her successful excursion. Why not? Miss Ederle now ranks with the leading feminists of the world.

They erect monuments to men who conquer and kill other men. Gertrude Ederle conquered a sullen and sour stretch of water in a much more efficacious manner than any man has done it, and with a bit less ballyhoo.

The bust of Gertrude, the first woman to swim the channel, fearlessly facing the bleak winds and growling surf toward the bust of Captain Webb, the first man to swim the channel, which stands on the British coast, will be a splendid inspiration through the years to all who place the "game beyond the prize."

GEORGETOWN MAKES PLAN FOR GRIDIRON WORKOUTS

Washington, Aug. 13—Georgetown University has accepted the invitation of the authorities of Asbury Park, N. J., to do their early Fall football training there. The football candidates will report to Coach Lou Little on September 1, and will remain in Asbury until September 16.

The loss of five regulars from Georgetown's team of 1926 will be a big gap for the coaches to fill Flaherty, Captain Hagerty and Metzger have graduated. Jawish and Murtagh, two regular guards, have accepted their sheepskins, and departed.

KING GEORGE'S YACHT NOW OUT OF RACES

London, Aug. 13.—King George's yacht, the Britannia, will not race again this season. His Majesty was displeased by the recent showing at Cowes, where the Britannia was beaten in several races during which he was on board. An examination just made shows that alterations made in the royal yacht are not satisfactory, the Britannia sailing badly in stiff winds.

FULLER LEADS SUGGS AND CHAPMAN

Sammy Fuller, sensational North End featherweight, is leading in the Boston Evening American's poll to name the world's featherweight champion. By a sensational spurt the Fuller supporters have enabled Sammy to pass Red Chapman and Chick Suggs.

It is seldom that a boxer has gained as much popularity as now held by Fuller. This colorful youngster has fought his way into the hearts of boxing fans.

Fuller has been favorably mentioned even in the letters written by supporters of other candidates in the contest. They all seem to agree that Sammy is improving with each bout and that in another year he will be virtually unbeatable.

Fuller's next ring start will be against Johnny Brown of England, European featherweight champion. Manager Rip Valenti is confident Sammy will smash his way to a victory over Brown.

Chick Suggs is a close second to Fuller, while Chapman, who is still receiving a heavy vote, is running a strong third. There is sure to be a merry battle for the ballots until the polls close tomorrow.

The standing follows:

Sammy Fuller	2,018
Chick Suggs	1,890
Red Chapman	1,791
Honeyboy Finnegan	1,118
Newport Johnny Brown	713
Johnny Dundee	666
Babe Herman	489
Leo (Kid) Roy	301
Benny Bass	260
Joe Glick	121

The Irish National Foresters will hold an open handicap track and field athletic meet at Russell Field, North Cambridge, on Labor Day. The events are 100 yards dash, 440 yards run, 880 yards run, three miles run and running high jump. The prizes will be gold watches for firsts, travelling bags for seconds and umbrellas for thirds. There will be a Foresters' mile handicap also in which the prizes will be a Forester's cup, a travelling bag and umbrella.

BOSTON TYPOS PLAY NEPONSET SUNDAY

The Boston Typos play their final game before leaving for St. Louis when they engage Jim Butler's Neponset town team at Neponset, Sunday. This will serve as a preliminary warm-up to the national tournament for the Garry Herrman cup, which has been in competition for the past 17 years.

Sunday's game at Neponset will start at 3.15.

Tagging All Bases

The faltering Yankees lost to Washington, 5 to 2, getting only three hits off George Murray, a Yankee cast-off. The Yanks now have lost four straight and the Senators have won four straight, and the Hugmen lead Cleveland by only eight games.

The Indians had a walkaway, Lefty Miller whitewashing the White Sox, 5 to 0. Tris Speaker got three doubles.

Detroit lost to the Browns, 7 to 2 and flopped back into the second division.

The Reds jumped right back into the pennant swim by thrashing the Phillies, 9 to 2. Dressen led the attack with four hits, including a homer.

Public Parks Net Finals Today

Philadelphia, Aug. 13.—Ted Drewes of St. Louis, rangy defending champion, and Doner Mitchell, of Washington, reached the final round of the National Public Parks Tennis tournament on the Woodford Courts at Strawberry Mansion here.

The two survivors of representatives from thirty-six cities will play for the title today.

Drewes found his stride in the second set of his semi-final match against Elmer Rudy of Baltimore. Rudy's powerful forehand drives earned him the first set, 6—3. The St. Louisan increased the power behind his strokes in the second set and ran out the match 6—3, 8—6, 6—2.

Dooley eliminated Charles Leach of Chicago. The final score was 8—6, 6—4, 4—6, 6—3.

SUSPENSIONS FOR TWI BALL PLAYERS

Indefinite suspensions will be imposed upon eight Twilight league players tonight at the Quincy House where the directors gather in a weekly meeting.

Gus Gardella, formerly of South Boston; Tom McGuire, Malden's keystone sack guardian, and Leo Hartnett, another Bubble infielder, are in for a long rest.

This will prevent further wrangling between the Bickstone Valley and "Twi" monarchs.

It is alleged that more than a score of individual stars have hopped to and fro playing in both the "Twi" and Cape leagues. In "Twi" realms there is a written rule preventing such actions but it never was enforced.

One thing that is apparent and that is rear players who were engaged in a "flirtation with the Cape clubs are breaking Twilight laws and must take their medicine.

"Umpires must not delay the progress of any game over any questionable decision" is an imperative statement from President J. W. Mooney.

The announcement of next week's schedule will bring the meeting to a close.

Fort Banks Bouts Tonight

The Fort Banks amateur boxing tournament scheduled for last evening was called off because of inclement weather. The same card will be put on tonight, weather permitting.

Danny McFayden Signed by Red Sox

Danny McFayden, former Somerville High pitcher, is now a member of the Boston Red Sox. Bob Quinn has persuaded him to put his autograph to an American League contract.

The time limit is a year with the reserve clause inserted. Danny has been pitching for a team on Cape Cod and he has been winning steadily.

The Somerville boy will join the team at once and it is likely that a big Fayden Day will be arranged, as the team has a long home stay.

BUDGET PUTS END TO EXTRAVAGANCE

Boston Evening American Offers Aid to Housewives in Planning Expenditures of Income

Budget Talk No. 127
By MARTHA LEE

"THERE'S never enough," is the eternal cry of many, who in one way or another feel the cramping of their desires by the tightness of their purse strings.

I've come to the conclusion that successful spending is not so much a question of what we want as it is of which we want. We believe that if we can gratify a certain desire, we will be happy. Then when we have what we want, we find our fancy has flown to something else. And our wants become so diversified that it is hard to choose just what we may have with our limited funds.

But there is no one so poor that they may not have the privilege of choice. We must pay for what we want most with the sacrifice of our petty desires. The greater the sacrifice to attain a desire, the higher we esteem it when obtained.

But the eye must be fixed on a certain goal. Then thrift is made easy and we learn to discriminate between what is really necessary and what we can do without.

Don't be like the woman who wrote to me recently, "I have tried your budget system but it has exasperated me. My little girls will come to me on Wednesday asking for a little ice cream treat or candy, and all I can do is to point to the Budget Personal envelope and ask them if they can see any money in there for ice cream cones before next Saturday."

"Of course, I'll admit that Budget has helped me to pay off some of my back bills, but with a Budget I never seem to have the little things I want. So I've determined to spend as I go and trust to luck to get by."

Did you ever hear of logic like that? She admits that Budget helped her to pay off her back bills and yet because she cannot satisfy every whim she goes back to her haphazard spending with its trail of worries.

Perhaps if she had taken as a definite goal a college education for her daughters she would not find it so hard to withstand the siren voice of extravagance.

Budget stands ready to make possible our chief desires. It will teach us just what our necessary expenses are and what we can do without. It stands ready to lead us out of the puzzling maze of debts we have gathered about us, up to the height of our ambitions.

But we must first find our way to the path of Planned Spending. Write for your Budget form today. The sooner you begin your budget the sooner you free yourself from the burden of worry over financial troubles.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Miss E. F. writes: "We are a family of four. We find it very hard to make both ends meet. Brother turns in a salary envelope of $20. Sister pays $8 board and mother earns around $18, making a total of $46 a week. Expenses in maintaining the house amount to $35 a week. There is clothing to be bought and repairs to be made on the house, but somehow the money slides out as fast as it comes in.

"Perhaps our table is too extravagant or money is spent foolishly in buying clothes and then casting them aside after wearing them a few times. Could you possibly suggest some economical menus for people whose only hearty meal is at night and on Sundays? Could you send us a Budget form that would remove the frown from mother's face when she glances at the bill and wonders where the money went?"

I am only too glad to send you a Budget form and some economical recipe books that will help you in making better menus for the evening and Sunday meals. I am sure the standard budget for $46 a week will help you.

This will allow you $6 for savings and insurance, $8 for shelter and business carfares, also repairs and taxes, since I judge you own your own home; mortgage interest also comes out of shelter; $12.50 for food and milk including business lunches, $8 for clothing, $5 for operating, and $4.50 for personal.

Miss A. D. T. asks for recipe books for cutting down food expense. Income $4,200 a year. Her expenses for the month are rent $60, gas and electricity $8 to $9, telephone $4, carfares $6, food $40, fuel until $9, milk $7, insurance $ for the year. There are two adults and a ten months-old baby in family. Asks just what to allow for cloth ing, personal and savings.

Your income is really about $63.50 a week. This will allow you $12 for shelter including business carfares, $16.25 for food and milk including business lunches, $9.25 for operating, $9.75 for clothing, $6.50 for savings and insurance and $9.75 for personal.

Mrs. H. J. writes that with a family of five and a $50 income a week she has a hard time saving a few dollars. Has no carfares, taxes or auto expenses.

I can't understand why you can not save on this income. It must be that you are spending too much for food or clothing.

The standard Budget for $50 will give you $7 for savings and insurance, $10 for shelter, $16 for food including business lunches, $5 for clothing, $6 for operating and $6 for personal.

Mrs. D. J. writes, "Please tell me if one can go to keeping house on $20 a week, three in family including baby? Could furniture for the house be purchased also on this income?"

A $20 housekeeping Budget will allow $5 for shelter including business carfares, $6.50 for food which also means milk and business lunches, $2 for clothing, $2 for operating, $2 for savings, and $1.50 for personal.

Furniture payments come out of the Personal and Savings funds.

Are you in danger of falling into the chasm of Extravagance? Budget will take you safely across to the firm footing of Planned Spending.

Lots of people are keeping house on this sum, but it is touch and dinal However, a real home is worth many sacrifices.

Mrs. N. G. writes for a Budget for $27.50 a week. Pays $30 a month rent. There are three in family, including business lunches, $7.50 for food including business lunches, $7.50 for clothing, $1 for operating and $2 for personal.

Mrs. P. B. asks for a Budget for $39 a week. She and her husband are much interested in Budget. He works nights so she has many evenings to herself. Would like to do home work during this extra time.

Eight in family including six children. Expenses are laundry $1, rent $7, milk $3.10, groceries $14, business carfares $2.40, gas $4 a month, coke $2 a month. Owe a doctors' bill of $83 and another of $24.—Husband owes brother $500 and they are paying $1 a week on another back bill. Usually spends $2 weekly for amusements.

I would advise that you try the following Budget: $2 for savings and insurance, $8 for shelter including business carfares, $16 for food and business lunches including milk bill, $4 for clothing, $4 for operating and $4 for personal.

Try $2.50 for savings including insurance, $5.50 for shelter including business carfares, $11 for food including business lunches, $7.50 for clothing, $1 for operating and $2 for personal.

Try $3 for savings including insurance, $8 for shelter including repairs and taxes, $12.50 for food and milk including business lunches, $8 for clothing, $5 for operating, and $4.50 for personal.

Income is really about $63.50 a week. This will allow you $12 for shelter including business carfares, $16.25 for food and milk including business lunches, $9.25 for operating, $9.75 for clothing, $6.50 for savings and insurance and $9.75 for personal.

Income $4,200 a year. Rent $60, gas and electricity $8 to $9, telephone $4, carfares $6, food $40, fuel until $9, milk $7, insurance $ for the year. There are two adults and a ten months-old baby in family. Asks just what to allow for clothing, personal and savings.

Your income is really about $63.50 a week. This will allow you $12 for shelter including business carfares, $16.25 for food and milk including business lunches, $9.25 for operating, $9.75 for clothing, $6.50 for savings and insurance and $9.75 for personal.

Mrs. H. J. writes that with a family of five and a $50 income a week she has a hard time saving a few dollars. Has no carfares, taxes or auto expenses.

I can't understand why you can not save on this income. It must be that you are spending too much for food or clothing.

The standard Budget for $50 will give you $7 for savings and insurance, $10 for shelter, $16 for food including business lunches, $5 for clothing, $6 for operating and $6 for personal.

Mrs. D. J. writes, "Please tell me if one can go to keeping house on $20 a week, three in family including baby? Could furniture for the house be purchased also on this income?"

A $20 housekeeping Budget will allow $5 for shelter including business carfares, $6.50 for food which also means milk and business lunches, $2 for clothing, $2 for operating, $2 for savings, and $1.50 for personal.

Furniture payments come out of the Personal and Savings funds.

FINE AND SUPERFINE

FURNITURE FINDS—Find I. Actually astounded was I to find a 5-piece unfinished breakfast set for $10.75. Rock bottom price. Drop leaf table and four chairs. Solid construction, with many a nobila. Fun to finish in your favorite enamel or wood finish.

MY NEXT FIND sounds almost phoney. Oblong mirror, three sizes, antique or silver finish frames, mitred on four sides. 8¢c. Comes in three sections with top ornament.

STILL ANOTHER FIND is fashionable Coxwell chair with loose spring cushions. Covered with jacquard velour, $19.75. Hundreds are buying at this remarkable price. Seems most too good to be true—the chair you've been wanting for so long, at the price you've wanted to pay.

A TRULY AMAZING price for an end table of unusual design is $1.95. Shaped like small edition of a davenport table. Highly polished top. Graceful lines. One woman took four. Several hundred in stock, but going like wild. A pair are pretty flanking each end of the divan.

EQUALLY GOOD are the values in other departments. For instance—electric hair dressing set for 59c. Waving rod, attachment transforming it into curling iron, another attachment for marcelling, and a comb attachment for drying hair. Complete with full length cord, plug, non-heating handle. Equipped with regulating heat unit so hair can't possibly singe or burn.

UP TO $3.50 are the values of jewelry that is selling for 50c in one convenient store. Lovely bracelets, beads, brooches, ear rings—not the usual 50c jewelry. Pieces you'll be proud to wear.

QUAINT COLONIAL four-posters for the amazing price of $24.75. Mahogany ply headboard will not split. In three sizes; always in style.

HERE'S THE COMBINATION you've been trying to find. Twelve packets bath crystals and one box bath powder, three odors in each box. Complete at $1.

FLOWERS THAT BLOOM on the shoulder are the smartest this season. Newest of the new are nasturtiums. Single clusters, $1 each.

EVEN YOUR HORSE will be proud of you if you ride in a smart habit. Linen breeches and sleeveless coat to match are fashion's midsummer regulations. Complete for $15. Do let me tell-n-where. Ideal for hiking costume, too, or most any vacation sports. Swagger cut. Tremendously becoming.

ONE SIMPLE RITE to keep hands lovely is daily use of special hand cream. Leaves no disagreeable oiliness. Protects. Preserves. Smoothes out every little roughness. Makes every gesture a delight. Prevents skin becoming dark and flabby. $1 for generous jar that will last weeks 'n weeks.

FOR THE CLIFF DWELLER in the kitchenette apartment or for any small family, a truly remarkable find in enamel lined ice chests. Top icing style. Two generous wire shelves and space for milk bottles besides floor space. Reliable make $13. The value you will never beat. I'm whispering the secret—a special offer just for the readers of this column, as a favor to me.

Martha Lee's Reliable Recipes

GREETINGS everybody.

Of course none of us can remember back to when the humble tomato was regarded as a sure cause of cancer, but such was the case and the old folks looked askance at the diner who dared to eat a serving of tomatoes and lettuce.

How different today! During the Summer the tomato is almost our chief vegetable, appearing on our tables in many different ways—in salads, sandwiches and soups as well as baked, stuffed, fried and broiled.

The tomato is not high in caloric value (the would-be-thins should be thankful for this, but this round, red, delicious vegetable is crammed full of vitamine B, which is a very valuable vitamine. It should be eaten raw or only slightly cooked, as intense heat destroys some of these precious vitamines. Cooked tomatoes, however, are delicious, and furnish the necessary minerals and salts.

Here's one way that I am sure will obliterate each of the family to pass their plate for a second helping:

TOMATO SALAD — Chop two hearts of celery, one red tomato (not too ripe), and a tart apple into fine bits. Place a heaping tablespoon of this mixture upon a crisp curled lettuce leaf; lay three or four long shreds of raw cabbage and one of green or red pimento across the top. Just before serving squeeze a few drops of lemon juice over each helping. This recipe contains sufficient minerals, acids and salts to balance a heavy carbohydrate meal.

TOMATO SANDWICHES: Select rather small tomatoes of uniform size, cut bread extremely thin; cut into rounds two inches in diameter. Spread each slice with creamed butter. Lay on the bottom slice a thin slice of peeled tomato the same diameter as the bread. Season with salt and pepper, a drop of lemon juice and cover with top slice.

TOMATO SANDWICH WITH HORSERADISH—Mix two tablespoons of mayonnaise dressing with two tablespoons of grated fresh horseradish root. Spread thin, round slices of bread with this mixture and put between this, thin slices of tomato; sprinkle with salt.

And that's all from Martha on Tomatoes for today.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

Practical Hints on Spending by a Plan

ADVICE TO LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young married woman of sixteen. My husband is eighteen.

We were a happy married couple until another woman entered my husband's life. This affair has been going on now for quite a while.

Whenever I mention this woman's name to him he abuses me terribly. He says I can go back to my mother because he doesn't care a rap about me.

He takes this woman out at least three times a week and spends half his pay on her. He says seven dollars is enough for me to keep a home on. I am thinking of going back to my mother. I hate to break up a comfortable home but I think I will be compelled to do so. Please give me some advice about going back to my mother as I cannot very soon to become a mother.

NANCY

ARE you sure your husband is behaving in the way you state in your letter? Or are you allowing jealous suspicion to color your mind, my dear? If there is the least doubt give him the benefit of that doubt.

Be very sweet to him. Explain how much you need his care and protecting affection just now. He is young and perhaps thoughtless. But I believe if you keep your home happy and never nag or argue, he will do his best to help you.

Doubtless he will be very proud of the baby. Don't go to your mother unless he refuses to support you and is abusive, neglectful and unkind.

I feel certain that if you do your best to be sweet and thoughtful and keep the home running smoothly and happily you will find that he appreciates and loves you and his home.

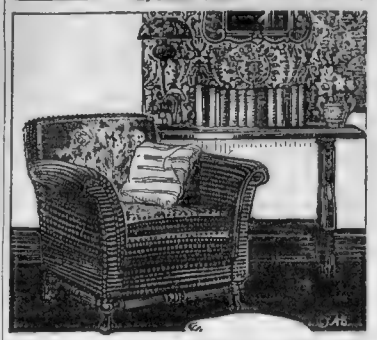
Furnishing the Home

By Marian Moore



I CANNOT close this series on tables without a word of advice to those among you who own a well-designed library table.

There is little hope of adjusting the mission oak table to fit the needs of the present fashion, but walnut and mahogany possesses a special beauty which entitles them to kind treatment. The above picture suggests an interesting arrangement in which the library table is used as a console; that is to say, placed against the wall to serve as a base for some motif of decoration.

Here the interest centres on the lovely East Indian print which is hung above the table, with a mirror in a polychrome frame whose soft tones blend admirably with the background. The lamp base is an old bird and lotus composition that contributes largely to the general artistic achievement.

The shade is a Galle glassware, in purplish agaunt opaque amber.

There is a flower vase of Florentine majolica, and bronze book-ends clasping several handsomely bound volumes whose rich leather and gold tones add to the group a touch of sumptuousness.

A pair of antique light brackets, which do not show in the picture, round out the decorations and a large down cushion of soft purple velvet placed before the easy chair diverts the attention from the bare space underneath the table.

The New, Easy Way of Keeping Your Silk Under Garments Looking New

IT IS NOW easy to keep that freshness of fabric—the beautiful finish and daintiness—that all silk pretties have when new. Linit them with LINIT, the remarkable laundry starch that restores the original newness to all fabrics. Try these simple directions:

AFTER careful, gentle washing with a mild soap, rinse in tepid water until water is clear—then wring. Dip in LINIT Solution (directions follow). Wring Linited garments dry as possible. Shake, roll tight in a clean cloth, each one separately if large, or several small ones together. Let stand fifteen minutes and iron on the wrong side, coaxing out the laces to hold their shape.

To prepare LINIT for lingerie, dissolve a level teaspoonful of LINIT in half cup cold water, add to three and a half cups hot water—not boiling. This will LINIT a nightgown, step-in, and a brassiere. LINIT lingerie with the fabric, so little is needed, and it leaves the finish smooth and pliable. LINIT prevents soil from penetrating the fabric. Linited lingerie wears longer and perspiration stains are easily washed from Linited garments.

Quaker Oats "stands by" you through the morning

Important for Children and Grown-Ups Alike

HOW you feel all morning depends largely on what you eat for breakfast. Thousands have unenergetic forenoons because of wrong breakfast eating.

To feel right, you must have a well-balanced, complete breakfast ration. At other meals—lunch and dinner—you get it. But breakfast is hurried—often badly chosen.

Thus Quaker Oats, containing 16% protein, food's great tissue builder, 68% carbohydrate, its great energy element, plus all-important vitamines and the "bulk" that makes cereals seldom needed, is the indelible urge of the world today.

Don't deny yourself the natural stimulation this rich food offers you.

Get Quaker Oats today. Grocers have two kinds: Quick Quaker, which cooks in 3 to 5 minutes, and Quaker Oats.

CHAPTER LI.

Copyright, 1926, Johnson Features, Inc.

MERRY gave the man at the next table a swift, sidewise glance from under sultry lids and dark curved lashes. Then she looked quickly away.

She took out her little vanity case, and as she powdered her short tilted nose, she could feel his eyes on her, still watching her. A dimple flashed in and out at the corner of her mouth.

She turned her head and looked at him again. He was a dark, heavy-set man with intent brown eyes and a bulldog sort of face. No one to wave flags over, as Merry remarked to herself.

"Here! What are you doing—flirting with that man?" Jinny's high voice asked suddenly, just behind her.

She and Derrick had stopped dancing in the middle of the dance and she dropped down on the chair beside Merry, still flushed and panting.

"No, I'm not exactly flirting with him," Merry answered with a toss of her head, "I just happened to look up at him, and he smiled at me. But who could blame me if I DID flirt with him? I'm not having much of a time sitting here by myself, you know!"

Jinny turned her head and spoke to her husband. "Go and bring Angus back here where he belongs," she said sharply.

Derrick started off but Merry called him back. "No don't take him away from his blonde. You aren't doing me any favors by bringing him back to me!" she said, "I'll tell you what you can do for me, though—get me a cocoa. I'm going home.

"Indeed, you're not!" piped up Jinny. "You're going to stay right here, and Angus Miller will just have to come back and dance with you! I wonder what he thinks he is, ditching the crowd this way!"

But Merry wouldn't listen to her. Nothing, she declared, would make her stay at the inn a second longer.

"I have a beast of a headache anyway," she fibbed, "and really I'm not having a good time. I don't know your crowd, and—well, I'm just going home, that's all."

She swayed to her feet, a little faint and dizzy from the "juney" she had had in the ginger ale.

Jinny and Derrick took her to the door, arguing with her all the way, insisting that she stay. She kept shaking her head, even after she was inside the taxicab and on her way home.

She never remembered the ride. But all at once the cab stopped, and looking out, she saw that they were in front of the Myrtle street house in Arlington.

The driver swung out and opened the door. He had the slip in his hand. "A dollar and a half," he said, peering at it.

"But I haven't any money," Merry answered stupidly. Her head was going around and around as the cheap liquor she had drank began to take effect.

But Moms insisted that she go to bed, and so finally she went. Dimly she listened to her mother's voice going on and on about the evil of drinking wood alcohol.

"It's wrong for anyone to touch it," she was saying, while Merry slowly and clumsily undressed herself. "It's bad enough for a man to drink, but how much worse for a girl—and a girl brought up as well as I was to know a woman who drinks."

Merry paid no attention to her. Her tired brain kept repeating: "I was too old for that young kid tonight. He thought I was too old for him. Think of it! Me! Too old for him! Think of it!"

At last she was in bed, the lights were out, and the room was silent. She slept as soon as her head touched the smooth coolness of the pillow.

It may have been three or four hours afterward that Merry woke up.

The house was perfectly still and the curtains at her bedroom window swayed back and forth like ghosts in the soft air of the Spring night.

She lay there for a moment watching them. Then she swung her feet out of bed and slipped into her kimono.

She turned on every light in her room, locked the door and walked over to her dressing table.

There Was a Light in the Sitting Room; Moms Must Be Waiting

There was a light in the sitting room of the house. Moms must be waiting for her.

Walking as if she were very tired or very sick, she went up to the front door and rang the bell.

"Got a dollar fifty?" she asked, when Moms opened the door, looking startled and puzzled.

"How did you happen to come home so early?" her mother asked, taking her old brown purse from the pocket of her apron. "Aren't you well?"

She paid the cab man and followed Merry into the house.

A little wood fire burned in the grate, for the spring night was raw and chilly. Merry sank down into a chair in front of it, and began to laugh.

"I'm well enough, but—I'm old, I guess," she answered heavily. "Old at twenty-two! Try to figure that out on your piano."

Moms got up and went over her "Merry, you've been drinking!" she cried accusingly. No wonder you're talking like this. Come on, now. Get up and I'll help you upstairs to bed! What have you had to drink?"

But Merry pushed her away with a weak little movement of her hands.

"I haven't had much to drink, Moms—he said, shaking her head and closing her eyes wearily, "not as much as you think I've had. I'm really pretty sober."

The Mirror Gave Back the Tired Droop of Her Lovely Mouth

The mirror gave her back the reflection of her face, the soft purplish shadows under her eyes, the tired droop of the lovely mouth, the whiteness of it.

Then she thought of Jinny's face that night under its tiny green sports hat. She thought of the faces of the three other girls in Jinny's party. The pert pointed faces with the unmistakable stamp of extreme youth on them.

"Why, I'm old compared with them!" she knew, suddenly.

Girls nowadays started to be grown women at fifteen or sixteen. Almost before they were out of the cradle they were in the cabaret—painted and dizzy and peppy! Pep!—that was the great thing for a girl to have these days! Pep and youth, short-skirted and bazen-tipped!

Compared with sixteen, twenty-two really WAS old! Merry sighed as she realized it, and switched off the lights.

She was back in bed, wondering whether she had gumption enough to get up and cold-cream her pallid face when she heard an automobile coming up the street.

It came nearer and nearer, and then with a little rush it stopped at the door.

Once more Merry was out of bed in her bare feet. She ran across the room and peeped out of the window. There in the moonlit driveway stood Casale's new car, and getting out of it was Casale, herself. She had a bag in one hand and a leather hatbox in the other!

"Suit!" Merry hailed her, and then called in a low voice, "I'll be right down!"

She slipped into her little, pink felt slippers, and pattered down through the darkened house to let her sister in. As she reached the bottom of the stairs, the cuckoo clock in the dining-room sang out that it was 3 o'clock!

Two o'clock! What on earth was Casale doing—coming here at two o'clock in the morning!

"I'll bet a hat she's left Morley!" Merry thought excitedly, as she opened the front door, and let Casale into her mother's house.

Casale gives Merry some information which greatly surprises her in Chapter 52 of "Tarnished Wings" tomorrow.

Her Eternal Enemy

Perils that Spring from the Green-Eyed Monster

Drawn By Dorothy Flack

SHE'S sweet, she's lovely, she's the most adorable thing in the world and she's constantly battling against the worst enemy of all—and that's jealousy!

I wouldn't for worlds have the insidious influence against which a girl has to be constantly on guard. Jealousy is the one which most frequently besets her and sometimes ensnare her. And what a tragedy that is! From the loveliest thing in the world, she becomes the abomination of man, and woman alike—a hateful, ravening, unreasonable Fury—a veritable writhing serpent of jealousy and suspicion.

Watch carefully that the serpent of jealousy doesn't wreck—not only your own happiness, but the happiness of the loved one. It's like the serpent in the Garden of Eden—under the guise of friendliness and kindliness it will tempt you; and if your love is not strong enough you'll listen—and be lost!

Make up your mind that YOUR Love will be the real love, the true love that will bring you the happiness of which you've dreamed. Be strong and rise above yourself to a plane on which jealousy has no place.—DOROTHY FLACK barriers down—I mean there is almost no social life to restrain her or the men."

Rogers nodded. "It's the big test," he said staccatically.

"I don't know what's become of my modesty—I seem to have lost it altogether," she said, near now, since the flood gates were open, to boil back nothing—except Kelvin. "Most of the time I'm sick at heart with hating myself for being just a common creature, ruled by sensuality, and then again I grow hard and reckless.

"When men look at me in a certain way I despise them; yet, the Henry Brierleiter, I seem to tolerate them. It's positively indecent and I know it. When I see other girls who don't have this curse in their blood I envy them so much I could—I could——"

She was dangerously near tears and Rogers came over without hesitating and shook her by the shoulders.

"You didn't feel wicked and sinful when you kissed me, did you?"

"You aren't like the others," she said softly. "You're good."

"Don't fool yourself," Lee Rogers stated. "But I wouldn't get all panic-stricken over kissing a man—because I liked him. That was an impulsive emotion that won't necessarily send you to a hell of brimstone and damnation. The trouble with you is that you're just a little prone to blame New York for your own personal faults. You—all girls—are perfectly safe in New York as long as they want to be safe."

"I know it," Joslyn admitted, "but maybe I don't care to be safe. I'm sick of so many years and it was so terribly dull. It isn't that I exactly want to do anything bad, but I want—well, I want to be free and do as I please and have a lot of excitement."

Rogers shook his head rather sadly. "The prescription," he said, "would ruin the whole world if everyone followed it out. Fortunately most people aren't free and can't do as they please and don't have much excitement. And they're the ones that keep the wheels progress—running smoothly. Well, there is nothing I can say to you."

The force of Joslyn's burning revolution had passed and she smiled wanly. Her whole body seemed on the point of slumping.

"There's nothing you can do for me," she said, wanly. "The money, of course—but I shouldn't take it, I know. If I am a success maybe I can pay you back."

"Don't worry about that," he urged. "I didn't work for it—it's part of the income from an inherited trust fund. But you made a mistake a second ago when you said there was nothing I could do for you. I think I could straighten out every problem you have on earth."

Joslyn looked at him with sudden hope shining on her face. "If you say that I almost believe you."

"I think I could solve everything for you by marrying you. That's what I've wanted to do from the first, Joslyn, dear."

Making of a Husband

By ANNE LISLE

"There's one question I'm anxious to put to you," the sheriff said without further preliminary. "When you were urging me not to arrest May and Zeke the other night on a charge of kidnapping or abduction or—worse, was it because you thought they was absolutely innocent in the matter of Arlett's disappearance?

"It was," said Jim.

The words seemed to forge the last link in the evidence which chained him to Arlette—and the mystery of her disappearance.

"You're convinced—as far as you're able to judge—that May and Zeke Schmidt don't know nothing—criminal about the disappearance of her sister Arlette," asked Sheriff McCandless in a tone as dry as every page Blackstone ever wrote—and as legal.

"I'm dead sure of it," Jim said crisply.

"Why couldn't you say that tother day and save me a lot of speculating?"

"I wasn't quite so sure then."

"Why did you interfere with the processes of the law if you wasn't quite sure?" the sheriff asked mincingly.

"I gave you my reasons for interfering then," Jim said with quiet but stately displeasure. "I didn't call it interfering, however, I called it offering a neighborly bit of advice—suggesting the wisdom of a course you have overlooked."

"Funny, we thought we knowed how to run this neck of the woods before you came," said McCandless, putting on his accent a bit thick and sending me a knowing smile as much as to say he could play mom key with Jim just as well as Jim could amuse himself with one McCandless.

"That's all right," Jim said impatiently. "But you forget that you were all for arresting May and Zeke until I jumped in and reminded you that they couldn't very well run away and that if they were guilty it was no good tipping them off until you had enough evidence to make an arrest within your province."

"But if I'd of had enough ever dance you'd advised me different!"

"How can I know? Circumstances alter——"

I wondered if they were fencing if they were awakening to a feeling that each had a foeman worthy of his steel. But I had no chance to do more than get a somewhat much studying of cause and effect, for the sheriff took on a pompast to contemplate Jim sarcastically and then he flung at him:

"Supposing I had enough evidence now for an arrest, would you advise me to make it?"

Jim hesitated. He seemed to be calculating something most carefully. When he had thought it over to his own satisfaction he said:

"Have you enough evidence for an arrest?"

"Please like it," the sheriff replied drily.

"Are you sure there is any need for an arrest? Why must you read something criminal into this—conjecture?" Jim asked. "Couldn't she just have gone away for a spell——"

"Is it likely?"

"Why not? Girls do run away——"

"Stage struck gals. Love that are bored at home. Arlette had no reason to be bored. She had plenty of excitement—plenty of——" The sheriff hesitated ominously before his last word, which, when it finally came, proved to be "Admirers."

That word was aimed at Jim. If there had been any doubt of it I should have been convinced by the sad and sidelong glance the sheriff sent in my direction, just managing to miss my eyes.

"The child was undoubtedly popular and admired," Jim replied with astonishing equanimity in view of all I knew and of all I had heretofore suggested that I suspected.

"I guess Nick Perry would have married her if she'd wanted him to—least wave he might of before he got interested in that rich and mighty relative of yours that I've just been interviewing," said the sheriff.

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

WILL you kindly tell me if the double ring ceremony at a wedding is passe now? I have always thought that would be the service I would have read when I was married. Now so many of my friends, fiance included, say it is out of date.

A. If the service is still correct, doesn't the bride ring to the groom match the one he gives her, i. e., isn't is platinum? A READER.

THE double ring ceremony is not used often now in this country. In the European countries it is almost always used, that is, most customarily wear wedding rings.

But most American men do not like to wear wedding rings, so indeed they do not like to wear any other kind of ring. However, there is only one reason for not having a double ring ceremony, if you wish it, and that is the objection of the groom to be to wearing a ring. I think the groom should have his choice, for it is ridiculous for any one to wear a ring who doesn't wish to. Don't you think so? Why make a man miserable by, testing his love for you by demanding that he wears wedding ring? Talk it over again with him, gently, not demandingly, and make your decision rest on his wish.

2 Q. Is the groom's ring does not match the bride's ring. The bride's ring nowadays in this country is usually of platinum, but the groom's ring, when there is one, is usually of gold. The bride buys the ring for her groom—if there is to be one, and I strongly recommend that she buy a gold one.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it proper to send wedding announcements out before or after the wedding takes place? If after, just how long after the wedding, or, if before, just how long before the wedding? A READER.

WEDDING invitations are sent out about three weeks before the wedding. Wedding announcements are sent out as soon as possible after the ceremony has been performed. Usually the announcements are all ready to send out before the wedding — engraved, stamped, addressed—and they may be mailed so that they reach the friends in town the day after the wedding.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By John P. Medbury

THIS is a wonderful old world if we're living in, but it's no place any more for pedestrians. Automobiles take us off our feet in the day time and the thugs knock us down at night.

IN some cities the highwayman are wearing identification tags to keep from hooding up each other.

A CHICAGO man started to walk downtown last week and was sandbagged eight times. It was probably some new footpad getting practice.

HE said he didn't mind them practicing but he wished they wouldn't rehearse on his skull.

THE thugs hit him over the head so often that in less than a week they've worn out three of his hats.

HE says he's going to fool them next time by putting a piece of dynamite in the sweat band.

SOME men have been black-jacked so much in the evening that they don't waste the time to comb their hair any more.

ALL they do is brush it and then let the highwaymen part it.

ONE New York victim is an optimist. He claims the gas pipes that the thugs use on his skull have cured his dandruff.

IF the robbers find this out, they'll be charging us seventy-five cents extra for hair tonic.

IN some States the law won't let citizens carry revolvers. This privilege is only enjoyed by holdup men.

IF a highwayman catches a pedestrian with a gun he turns him over to a policeman.

IN New York, the burglars would rather have the Sullivan law than money in the bank.

A THUG doesn't care if it's against the law for a man to sell a revolver. He'd rather steal it anyway.

IF he can swipe a gun it cuts down his overhead.

THEY'RE also demanding longer evenings and shorter sentences.

DAILY SHORT STORY

JUDITH'S JUDGMENT

By Ruth Logan

THERE were a number of persons who would have been shocked had they seen Neil Jennings draw Judith Lawton down close beside him on the rear seat of Judith's car and kiss her. Neil paid no attention to the chauffeur. It was dark and very late at night.

"Judie, old dear, put in a good word for me with Tony, will you? He's thinking of taking a partner, and I want it to be yours truly."

"If you can plead cases like you can love, you ought to be a great help to Tony," admitted Judith, dodging another kiss. "Behave, silly boy! What will my chauffeur think?"

"Who cares what he thinks?" Neil bragged. "Used to it, no doubt." He used to drive for the Lamberts, you know."

"But the Lamberts are nice," Judith snapped. "I'm sure Mary Lambert wouldn't be guilty of—of——" he begged.

Neil tried to embrace her. She moved gently away.

"Maybe Mary wouldn't, but her husband would! Jerry Lambert's a stepper."

"I didn't think Jerry ever looked at anyone else."

"Oh, nothing serious, I suppose. Jerry hasn't much courage when it comes to a pretty woman."

"But Mary's awfully plain — no charm, no pep."

Neil Jennings grasped Judith's hands daringly. "Think of all the money I'd make as Tony's partner. We would spend it together, Judie."

Judith tried to free herself from the man's frenzied grasp. He poured compliments into her ear.

"See you tomorrow night, darling, at the Country Club," said Neil as she struggled to avoid his kiss. Leave Tony at home with his law books, if you can manage it," he begged.

"I'll try," promised Judith with a glow in her eyes and a mischievous note in her voice.

Tony was in bed when Judith entered, so she tip-toed into his room and kissed his forehead gently. Then removing a book from his half relaxed hand she went to her own room.

The following night Judith eluded her husband and made her way to the Country club alone. Neil had not yet arrived.

"Hello, Jerry," she called as Mr. Lambert sauntered down the walk and met her. "Where's Mary?"

"Poor Mary had a splitting headache. Made me come alone. Hated to do it, but Mary insisted. Unselfish little thing, Mary makes me ashamed when I realize how little I can do for her. By the way, has Tony got his partner yet?

"He hasn't made a choice yet. It's up to me in a way, Jerry. Tony depends a lot on my intuition. Tony said he'd consider my judgment in the matter."

"If you want your chance you ought to be very nice to me. How nice could you be?"

"Pretty darned nice," laughed Jerry. "I'd lay down and let you walk on me, for instance!"

"Would you come for a long drive in the cool night air with me?" asked Judith. "There's a moon."

"That beats dancing," agreed Jerry. "Great idea!"

"Let's go quickly before Neil sees us. He's very insistent and three's not company, eh, Jerry!"

"Well, just as you say," he answered soberly.

"Neil said something this afternoon about having a date with you Jude. Frankly, I didn't quite understand."

"Maybe you'll understand, some day," said Judith, mischievously. Then she demanded a cigarette.

Their hands touched as Jerry held the match close to her lips.

"Wish Mary could have come," Jerry lamented. "I believe I'll have you drop me off at the house on our way back, if you will.

"One of those old-fashioned husbands who loves his wife?" Judith tried hard to sneer, though she wanted to laugh.

"Perhaps."

"Couldn't forget it for just one night, could you, Lambie? That's not very nice, sighing for Mary when you're with me, here in the moonlight!"

Jerry made a move toward her. Then she drew back.

"I know you are just joking, Judith," he said. "You are attractive and I'm human enough to want to kiss you, but it wouldn't be honorable, now would it? Here I am in Tony's car with Tony's wife!"

Judith picked up the speaking tube and ordered her chauffeur "Home."

Bewildered, Jerry followed her into the house. She ran to Tony and threw herself into his arms. Mr. True Blue."

"Eureka!" she screamed in delight. "I was so afraid they'd both prove cads, Tony. Our little scheme worked! Jerry's your partner. He wanted to kiss me and didn't because of—of honor," she gasped.

Tony Lawton held out his hand to Jerry.

"My Gosh! I can scarcely believe it!" he murmured. While Tony Lawton looked on, Judith threw her arms about Jerry and kissed him warmly.

"If you think this news will cure Mary's head let's go see her. We'll motor back to the club. I'd love to see Neil when he's really mad!" Judith seemed like a naughty child.

"Fancy him, Tony!" she added, "imagining for one moment that I'd fall for his line! It's just too funny —but let's start. I can't wait to get back."

"We're picking Mary up on the way out aren't we, Judith?" Jerry asked.

"Oh, we are. Indeed, old fashioned

MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By Helen Rowland

THERE is a reason for everything under the sun, even germs and rosebugs and caterpillars and confirmed bachelors. Yes,—and even for the FLAPPER.

Once upon a time, the poor "old maid" was the butt of about three-quarters of the world's worst jokes. To be among the "sentimentally unemployed," to lose out in the man-hunt, to be "ladylike but lonely," after thirty, was woman's greatest crime.

She might make as many matrimonial failures as Peggy Joyce, and still be envied and admired; but to be an "unplucked blossom" in the Garden of Love was to be ridiculed, sneered at, and pitied.

Every little girl, who beheld the spinster pilloried by the world and the comic magazines, secretly determined that she would "never be THAT," no matter what else she might be!

Better to be a divorcee, a gold-digger, a vamp or a chorus girl, and get all the masculine attention, than to be a "nice sweet young thing"—and sit around waiting for the great god, Man, to notice her, marry her or forget her. Better to resemble the painted "ex-Mrs. Four-flusher," than to be like "poor old Aunt Mattie!"

And that is how and when the FLAPPER was born!

• • •

Anything to please the men! Ever since Eve went in for modesty, ruffles and fig-leaves, woman has been trying to discover WHAT men really wants her to be, and struggling to Be It!

• • •

She is just as brazen, rowdy and free-and-easy as they encourage her to be—and just as modest and reserved and delicate as they insist she shall be. Just as painted and artificial as they tempt her to be—and just as artless and natural as they demand she shall be.

She is plump, when their fancy turns to plumpness and curves—and she is just "a rag and a bone," when their flair is for skinny women.

You can always gauge the momentary masculine fancy, by the advertisements in the street cars and magazines. All the space once devoted to exploiting flesh-foods, developers and "figure boulders," is now given over to reducing pills, anti-fat prescriptions, and hipless girdles.

• • •

Whatever man demands of woman, he always Gets! But, he gets it in such awful doses, that he soon sickens of it—and wants something else.

• • •

When he professed to like women sweet and innocuous, he got the foolish, fainting "clinging vine," who nearly choked the life out of him.

• • •

But, he is already grumbling, and complaining to heaven of his bargain. He isn't satisfied—not he! And HOW is a woman to know what man wants if he doesn't know, himself!

• • •

Perhaps—oh PERHAPS, some rare and radiant day, man will discover what he REALLY wants! And, then, he'll get a Real Woman—strong, fine, sweet, gentle, charming, intelligent and companionable! We strive to please!

Tortured by rash on face

Resinol stops itching and makes skin clear and smooth

Piney Creek, N. C., Jan. 4.—"I had a breaking out on my face that looked like chicken pox. I suffered so from it that at night I would not sleep for hours at a time. I tried various remedies, but nothing did me any good until I tried Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. It stopped the itching and burning instantly and after a few applications the skin peeled off and left my face clear and smooth, instead of rough and pimply. I don't know of anything better than the Resinol products." (Signed) W. B. Mitchell.

Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment are sold by druggists everywhere. For a liberal trial size of each, free, write to Dept. 14-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

BOBBIE AND HIS PA

By William F. Kirk

IT seems to me, sed Ma to my dad last nite, that Missus Saunders, our new nabor, is not very careful about the way she is bringing up her chillern, sed Ma.

I supposs that is moastly her own business, sed Pa.

I knew you wud mak sum such reeply as that, sed Ma, I jest knew it.

I am glad I dident disappoint you, sed Pa.

I dosnt know why I talk up matters with you at all, sed Ma. All you seem to think about is yure work & the sporting paige, Ma sed.

For heavings sake, wife, sed Ma, what differents does it mark to you how Missus Saunders brings up her chillern? They are her chillern & not yures, sed Pa. We all hav our own trubbels in this life, sed Pa, without talking up the trubbels of others.

If Christofer Columbus had sed that, sed Ma, he wuddent of sailed across the ocean & he wuddent of found America, sed Ma. All progriss, sed Ma, was made by men that was too big to tend to thare own littel affares, sed Ma, & I guess that will hold you for a minnit.

Old Chris Columbus was a big man, sed Pa. He was too big to worry about the way his nabors bringed up thare chillern, sed Pa.

& I am a small woman, I supposs, sed Ma, a littel, insignificant worm, sed Ma, is that it?

I wuddent think of calling you a worm, sed Pa.

You better not call me a worm, sed Ma, you better not dare call me a worm.

Bobbie, sed Pa, I think the Chicago Cubs has a good chanst to win a pennant this yeer, sed Pa.

Never mind the Chicago Cubs, sed Ma. I am speeking to you. I am asking you if you wud dare to think of calling me a worm, sed Ma.

No, sed Pa, I wuddent dare to call you a worm. A worm is humbel & lowly, sed Pa, but it minds its own bisness & never tells its nabors how to bring up thare own littel worms, sed Pa.

You are almost un-bare-able at times, sed Ma. Most husbands like to dis-cuss the topicks of the day with thare wifes, sed Ma, but you can stam & durry yure noase in that old sporting page or the markit page, sed Ma, & I cant git a peep out of you.

Than Pa got kind of huffy, he throwed the paiper across the room & began to walk up & down like a Polar Bare in the Zoo.

You poor martir, sed Ma, how bosm life does Paul on you, sed Ma.

What do you mean, Ma, Paul on him? I sed.

I am so beside myself I dont know what I do mean, sed Ma. Wen you haf a wife of yure own, Bobbie, sed Ma, try to mak her problems yure own. If you do that, sed Ma, she will be glad to share your troobels.

May be that is O. K., but if a gent dosnt git married he wont haf no trubbles o share.

FASHIONS AND FANCIES

"A HAIR-BREADTH Escape" is a familiar expression, for it surely represents a close call. Just so, by the breadth of its hair-line stripe, does the silk crepe two-piece sports frock escape the mediocrity that is apt to distract from the solid tone crepe de chine dress, that is being done—and overdone—this Summer. Silk tie, and piping, and narrow leather belt are of the same color as the tiny stripe, thus cleverly emphasizing this dainty fabric pattern.

Cross-Word Puzzles have put all of us on more familiar terms with our dictionaries, and now come alphabet frocks to further our style education. The latest fad in printed silks is the alphabet design in black or navy figures upon a white or tan ground. A jumper blouse of this novelty silk is combined with a fully pleated skirt of navy or black sheer crepe.

Saving for a Rainy Day—The practical woman wears a motor or sports coat of English fabric that has been given a rainproof finish. In weight, one green, beige, Oxford blue and all of the other lovely sport shades of the current season, these coats are quite as smart, in color and cut, as any topcoat without the double purpose of rain or shine wear.

Whilds and Wooly are homespun novelty weave coats that are leading the daytime Summer fashions in wraps for shore, mountain and country-club wear. These smart wraps have natural lynx or badger collars, which give a more distinctive air than if the usual dyed pelts were used.

Pairs of Prism Pins that look as if they might be made from the crystal prisms of a chandelier are the latest word in jeweled hat ornaments. Used side by side, they are placed, at a slanting angle, through the side of the crowns of the new silk or felt hats.

Turn About Fair Play seems to be the motto of the latest English slip-on sweaters of horizontal zigzag weave, for no favoritism is shown between nephyr wool and rayon—of equal importance are the tri-color rayon stripes and the alternating ones of beaver.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN BOSTON AUGUST 13, 1926

Teaching British College Boys to Fly

Why Don't We Do That in America?

THIS YOUNG MAN, WHO ROWS IN THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY BOAT CREW, ALSO LEARNS AT OXFORD TO FLY AND DEFEND HIS COUNTRY ACCORDING TO MODERN METHODS. HERE YOU SEE HIM PRACTISING MACHINE GUN FIRE FOR AVIATION PURPOSES.

The United States invented the flying machine, and then, so far as flying is concerned, THE UNITED STATES WENT TO SLEEP. Will somebody please wake us up?

This little picture ought to help.

At Oxford, justly considered one of the great universities of the world, young men are taught ANCIENT knowledge and MODERN FLYING.

There has been established "an Oxford University air squadron," and many young men of Oxford are eagerly availing themselves of the opportunity to study aviation, perfect themselves in flying, and also, as you see in this picture, as USERS OF MACHINE GUNS IN THE AIR, thus preparing themselves to defend their country if need be.

Why haven't we air squadrons at our American universities? Isn't this country rich enough to afford them? Are there no men rich enough out of their own pockets to supply planes for students and pilots to man them as instructors?

There would be no lack of eager flying students in any of our universities if the OPPORTUNITY were offered.

Any university anxious for greater attendance could double the number of its students by advertising "All young men attending this university will be taught to fly." The editor of this newspaper suggested a year ago to the head of the Chicago University that he should make flying a part of the university training, and offered to donate one flying machine to start the work. But the thing could not then be arranged.

It ought to be arranged. We shall need fliers. This country is hated and envied by Europe and Asia. Hatred and envy lead to war.

He Knew His Job

But He Got No Special Recognition

Uncle Sam, in the last ten months of the war, sent 1,880,839 men and 4,666,000 tons of cargo across the ocean, the largest movement of men and goods by water in an equal time in history.

During the rush part of this unparalleled activity General Peyton C. March was Chief of Staff. Next to Pershing's, his was the most responsible assignment in our army. He upheld Pershing superbly.

A Paris paper quotes March as saying: "I did it." Anybody who knows him knows he never said it. He is not a boaster.

Just the same, he did a lot of it. He picked subordinates with exceptional skill. He built swiftly, and from a mere shell, a staff that soon functioned effectively. He played no favorites. And he was adamant against pressure from politicians and profiteers.

He got no special recognition or reward. Congress refused to promote him. But he deserves unstinted admiration for doing a great work in a great way.

Amateurs and Pros

No Disgrace to Earn a Living

Suzanne Lenglen becomes a PROFESSIONAL tennis player, to earn $200,000 by a tour in the United States. It is preposterous, especially in a democracy like France or the United States, that an athlete should lose standing because he uses his ability TO MAKE a LIVING.

It was reasonable enough for British gentlemen that wanted to box and feared professionals that would have knocked both wind and consciousness out of them, to establish two classes, amateurs and professionals, gentlemen and NOT gentlemen.

But there ought to be only ONE kind of sport, in this country, open to all like everything else, with the best man winning. And if an athlete can play the game while making a living at it, so much the better and so much the more honor to him.

Wise Japan

Asia for Asiatics—Good Idea

It is reported that Japan now discourages Japanese emigration on a large scale, except as confined to the Far East. A wave of Japanese emigrants bound for South America is held back. Japan's population increases 750,000 a year, which presents a great problem. It might be solved by distributing energetic Japanese surplus in parts of Asia that lack energy. The Japanese might do in part of Asia what we, the whites, did to India in this country.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

THE subject of this article is IT YOU MUSTN'T—HURT—LITTLE —SISTER. — BECAUSE — SHE'S—A GIRL. And it will be dedicated to all the Mad Little Boys in the world.

Miss Evelyn Genevieve Baxter inspired it. Miss Baxter is six years old, red-headed, husky and a terror.

Her brother, Raymond, aged seven, is merely an "also ran." He's a nice little boy, but he hasn't as much pep in his whole body as Evelyn has in her little finger.

Here's what happened yesterday morning. Evelyn was on a rampage. She had yanked Raymond's hair, scratched his nose, busted his aeroplane and kicked his shins to a fare-ye-well.

Raymond is a patient, plodding little mortal, but at last the worm turned and he handed sister Evelyn one of the greatest upper cuts of the season. Whereupon sister burst into loud, wet yells and ran for Mama.

And Mama said "Shame on you, you naughty, NAUGHTY boy! You should protect your little sister instead of slapping her. Only bad boys hurt little girls. Go straight to your room and stay there. We'll see what your father has to say about this young man, when he comes home."

So Raymond went to his room and Evelyn snuggled in Mama's lap and was comforted.

Therefore today I'm appearing for Raymond. He being incommunicado, I'm going to take the stand in his defense.

Why all this "protect your little sister" stuff when she's damaging your contours and wrecking your emotions all morning? If she's able to deliver a kick, isn't she able to receive one? We'll say she is.

Needed a Kick

Moreover she NEEDED that kick. She had it coming to her as part of her social training and no one should have interfered. It was high time she began to understand the eternal truth that she who kicketh in this life will get slapped in turn. It would save her a lot of trouble, now and later. Other ill would probably keep her out of the divorce courts twenty years from now, for one thing. And keep her in a job, when mama's lap and papa's roof have ceased to protect her.

But instead of profiting by this wholesome lesson, Evelyn is going to grow up with the mistaken notion that she's exempt from punishment because she's a little girl—and little boys mustn't hurt little girls whatever the provocation.

This goes for more than little girls of six and boys of seven. It goes for great big grown-up ladies and men. There's more than one way of chewing an ear or kicking a shin, and the bright emancipated little ladies of this twentieth century know 'em all.

Urges Fair Play

I'm a twentieth century lady myself, but I do like fair play and I hereby protest against the stuff that some of my sex are putting over. This chivalry stuff is being overdone.

Time was when the men had most of the power and prerogatives on their side and we ladies needed chivalry badly. But it's merely a fifth ace for many of us now.

Almost any kind of a she who can weep loud enough and lie long enough can get damages out of a man on the flimsiest testimony in any court in this Union.

Nor is it always money she wants. Any woman can blast the reputation of any man, and often send him to prison for an extended term by "framing him" with a tale of "threatened virtue."

If one wishes to see to what vicious lengths sentiment can go in the cause of chivalry, consider the cases in which torture and murder have been condoned in the name of the "unwritten law."

Alimony—there's another neat graft which little sister works when she grows up. But have you ever heard of her howls when some daring male sues HER for alimony?

I admit that many abuses are still visited by man upon defenseless women, and such abuses should be sternly punished. But usually—USUALLY—little sister had it coming to her.

AND IT'S BAD MEDICINE FOR THE WHOLE HUMAN RACE TO TAKE HER SIDE WHEN SHE IS THE REAL OFFENDER.

BATTING AVERAGE OF DOLLAR GAINS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

IN the matter of publicity, the batting average of the dollar is creeping up week by week.

The financial page isn't big enough to hold it any more.

News of its exploits, its adventures and its future, have spread all over the paper.

A change in the style or cut or material of its outward attire is given as much prominence as the Prince of Wales falling off a horse.

The doings of the dollar is considered as good news now as prize fighters who don't fight, and married couples who do.

In more ways than one the dollar is more of an interest getter now than ever before.

One of the stories which daily chronicle its doings tells us that the French government, in a serious mood, forbids her citizens to keep company with a dollar for more than ninety days without turning it into honest, home-made francs.

It isn't a case of moral turpitude, but a measure to prevent profiteering on the fall of the franc.

In this land of the free spending and home of the brave front no law compelling citizens to part with their dollars has been found necessary.

Another story notes a contemplated change in the style of clothes.

Following the fashion of skirts the long green will be not so long.

The Federal efficiency expert proposes decreasing the length and breadth of the dollar bill to about two-thirds its present size in the interest of convenience.

Another front page item broadcasts the results of longevity experiments.

It is announced that a third again has been added to the lifetime of the dollar bill by the use of a new processed paper. Two million bills recently put into circulation will test the new material's effectiveness.

A few generations ago it was just a dollar trying to get along; now it is a headliner in the news the world over.

In publicity the long green age has arrived.

TALK LESS, LISTEN MORE, IS A GOOD MOTTO

When you are in company do you talk a great deal, irrespective of whether or not you have anything worthwhile to say?

You just jabber in order to keep saying something.

You may enjoy the society of persons who talk on subjects of which you know very little.

But you believe that being quiet might indicate ignorance on your part so you attempt to put in remarks which only serve to show your shallow knowledge of the subject more than silence would.

You are so afraid of being called "dumb" that you tried to talk about something of which you knew very little.

When others are engaged in conversation about something you don't understand why don't you listen instead of using your brain to try to think of something to say?

Your silence commands a certain respect and by listening you may learn enough to talk some other time and appear fairly intelligent.

Talk less; listen more.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

WHAT are the things which you cherish most of all Earth's vast store; is it the beauty of pines, storm-tossed, is it a rock-strewn shore? Is it the grace of the stately ships fading away in space? Is it a smile on a loved one's lips, joy of a loved one's face? What are the things that you hold most dear out of a world of bliss? Is it the glow of the quickening year and the green of the Springtime's kiss? None of these things do I love so well it could be first of all: neither the pines nor the ocean's spell nor the Spring with its ardent call. Only my dreams do I hold most dear, dreams with their magic art bringing old seasons and far things near, keeping you close in my heart.

UNSOLVED MYSTERY OF THE COMPASS

By Garrett P. Serviss

"You gave us some interesting facts about the action of the magnetic needle, but I was a little disappointed that you did not take up the matter of 'secular variation.' It would be of great interest to the engineers and surveyors of the country if we could have the latest ideas on its causes. —C. F. L."

THE secular variation of the declination of the compass needle, i. e., the slow change that occurs in the direction of its pointing with regard to true north, is still an unsolved mystery as far as concerns its cause or causes. No attempt yet made to explain it has satisfactorily filled the bill.

The earth is often called a great spherical magnet, and it acts very much as if it were uniformly magnetized about its axis of rotation. But the so-called poles of the earth's magnetism do not coincide with the geographical poles, although one of them lies within about 1,200 miles of the geographical north pole and the other at a somewhat smaller distance from the geographical south pole.

The geographical poles are the ends of the axis of rotation. But the magnetic poles are not diametrically opposite to one another.

The northern one lies in latitude about 71 north, longitude about 96 west, which places it in the northeastern corner of North America on the peninsula of Boothia Felix, east of Victoria Land.

Great Intensity

The southern one is in latitude about 73½ south, longitude 154 east, placing it on the Antarctic continent, in what is called Victoria Land.

If you put two little wafers to represent the magnetic poles on a globe at the places indicated, you will see that the line joining them does not pass through the exact centre of the earth, as does the axis of rotation.

Besides, the magnetic poles of the earth are not, like those of an ordinary magnet, the points of maximum magnetic intensity.

There are two other points, or regions, in each hemisphere where the intensity is greatest, and of these the strongest is situated in Canada, about latitude 52 north, longitude 92 west, which places it southwest of Hudson's Bay and north of the Albany River.

This is not far from the agonic line, or line of zero declination (on which the needle points true north), which now lies, with many small deflections, from South Carolina, to Michigan and across Lake Superior northward through Canada to the north magnetic pole.

Part of this line the needle points west of north; west of the line the needle points east of north. The magnetic charts furnished by the Coast and Geodetic Survey give many general details, but local observations are needed to determine the variation at a given point.

The phenomenon would be greatly simplified for practical study if the declination were not changeable. But in fact there is a slow shifting of the agonic line, and of the whole system, at one time toward the east and at another toward the west. These movements occupy centuries.

To illustrate their affect, we may recall that at London in the year 1580 the needle pointed about 11 degrees east. But in 1816 the declination had been so far reversed that the needle pointed, at London, 24 degrees west. This had declined to 12 degrees in 1926.

American records do not go back so far and are not for so full, except for recent years. Thus, in Boston in 1670 the declination was west 11 degrees, in 1755 west 7 degrees, and in 1926 again west 14 degrees.

Just to what extent the position of the magnetic poles changes is not known. The nearest approach to the northern pole seems to have been that of Ross in 1831, when he found his needle dipping at an angle only half a minute of arc less than 90 degrees, or absolute verticality.

He placed the pole at 70 degrees 5 minutes 17 seconds north, 96 degrees 43 minutes 48 seconds longitude west. Amundsen's observations in 1904-6 gave approximately latitude 71 degrees, longitude 96 degrees.

Near the south magnetic pole Mawson in 1909 found a dip of 89 degrees 48 minutes, in latitude south 72 degrees 25 minutes, longitude east 155 degrees 16 minutes.

These so-called poles, however, do not occupy the positions of those of a spherical magnet, for it has been calculated that "a bar magnet with the earth which would produce the magnetic effects observed at the surface would have its poles practically coincident."
